THE CURRENT Cuban refugee crisis is a frightening reminder to me of the 1991 Albanian refugee crisis in Italy, which I covered as a reporter for Newsweek. That summer, tens of thousands of desperate people crossed the Adriatic on homemade rafts and in hijacked fishing boats and tankers, and besieged the southern Italian coast. One single tanker that dropped anchor just off the Bari waterfront had 19,000 men, women, and children on it. The effect of the landing of that mass of humanity on that medium-size coastal city was devastating: Imagine the scene if half a million Asian refugees landed in a single afternoon at Fisherman's Wharf.

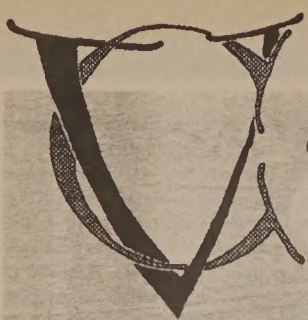

There are a lot of parallels between the Albanians and the Cubans. Both came from isolated and economically devastated countries whose founding ideology was lost on the second generation: The young people just wanted jobs, the "good life": They'd seen it on TV, it works. The Albanians, like the Cubans, were incredibly well-educated and hungry for the capitalist West. The people I met at the refugee camp near Brindisi were doctors, engineers, economists, writers. Some had taught themselves English from scraps of newspapers and packaging materials. All spoke at least some French, German, or Italian. All were convinced that America (Italy was just the first stop) was the only place on Earth where one could live unhindered in the pursuit of prosperity and happiness. I tried to tell them about crime, injustice, and expenses, but they would just shake their heads like I didn't know what I was talking about; they knew the real America. Maybe they were right.

Following that summer, the Italian Navy patrolled the Albanian coast to stop any further "boat people" from making the crossing, and the government promised Albania millions of dollars in aid. On page 21, freelance writer Daniel Johnson sheds some light on what life is like for young Havanans and why many have little to lose.

On a different note, this week's cover is the first of two parts of the Bay Guardian's summer look at sex in the '90s. Starting on page 22 we mark the first 10 years of safe sex: educator Carol Queen reveals that S/M practitioners heralded the advent of safe sex education; staff writer Susan Gerhard reports on the influence of safe sex on our sexual language, from the changing meaning of the word abstinence to word-sex in cyberspace; writer Mark Pritchard recounts a brief history of safe sex; and features editor Miriam Wolf has compiled a fascinating list of sex-perts' favorite bedside reading. Enjoy.

Letters to the Editor

Skating the night away

This letter is in regard to one of your "Best of the Bay" articles published July 27, 1994, titled "Best Maybe If We Just Ignore It Trend."

In 1980 our group skated from S.F. to L.A. in the Skate against Hunger. In 1990, 1991, and 1992 we skated from S.F. to L.A. and L.A. to S.F. in the Skate against Crack and Violence I, II, and III. May 4-6, 1994, we again skated from L.A. to S.F. in the Skate against Violence, after one of our members was shot and killed on Halloween night, 1993.

For 15 years the Golden Gate Park Skate Patrol has helped thousands of skaters, pedestrians, tourists, and others who use Golden Gate Park on Sundays, when the park is closed to automobile traffic.

The Midnight Rollers' "Friday Night Skate" is one of those unique, exciting phenomena that makes San Francisco a fantastic place to live. The ages of our skaters range from 9 to 60 years old. We have about 300 skaters every Friday. Skaters all over the country regard San Francisco, and Golden Gate Park in particular, as one of the best skating areas in the United States.

The Midnight Rollers just want to have a great time after working hard all week long. We want to enjoy ourselves after a week of kissing butts and taking crap from everyone from the boss to the bigot. We want to leave all our troubles behind and skate the night away.

In praise of Tomorrow

I just wanted to let you know how much I appreciate your decision to run the comic strip This Modern World on a weekly basis. Tom Tomorrow is one of my favorite social satirists.

But what happened to Washington? It vanished with no reason given. I miss it a lot. Please bring it back, or let us know why it's gone.

DAVID ROSEN
Oakland

Managing editor Tim Redmond responds: We're glad to have Tom Tomorrow's cartoons, too. We were also sad to lose Washington, but there was nothing we could do about it: The cartoonist, Mark Stamaty, signed an exclusive contract with Time magazine this year that ended his syndicated strip.

The hippie temptation

While Johnny Angel's assessment of Woodstock '94 ["The Illin' Fields," 8/10/94] was generally on target and even vaguely humorous, one sentence reinforces a prejudice that is becoming increasingly acceptable among many of the self-important poseurs who like to think of themselves as vanguards of some new, cutting-edge culture.

"Nobody loathes hippies as much as I do..." Angel writes in comparing the Grateful Dead to the Spin Doctors. Why is it OK, even fashionable, to deride hippies and followers of the Grateful Dead? If Angel had taken the time to substitute another word for hippies (i.e., blacks, gypsies, heterosexuals, etc.), perhaps he would have seen how easily intolerance and bigotry are integrated into popular culture.

Once the 1960s ended, "hippie" became a difficult term to define. Are you a hippie if you have long hair? Are you a hippie if you smoke pot? Are you a hippie if you enjoy Grateful Dead shows? I don't necessarily consider myself a hippie, but I certainly loathe the cynicism and offhanded posturing of writers like Johnny Angel far more than the peace, love, and sharing values exemplified by hippies of the Woodstock culture. That's Woodstock '69, by the way, not Woodstock '94.

DARREN RICHARDSON
Berkeley

Johnny Angel responds: In response to your letter regarding my Woodstock essay, first, thank you for the somewhat watered-down compliment ("vaguely humorous"), and then a hearty 'what, are you kidding?' to your charges of bigotry and intolerance.

To begin, the piece was clearly Dead-favorable, and not in the least an attack on the band's fans, but a critique of the hijacking of the Dead's mystique and drawing power to foment a new movement with no basis in anything. The Grateful Dead have created an oeuvre that's unmatched in rock, and this was clear enough in the brief mention.

But how dare you equate the disdain I voiced for modern, faux hippies with bigotry. Blacks, gays, and gypsies don't choose their race or culture and have little say in how they're perceived. Hippies circa 1994 are embodying an idiotic affectation by choice, and as a resident of the Upper Haight, I can assure you, it's the most irritating affectation I've ever dealt with en masse.

Selfish, spoiled scions of the upper and middle classes slumming in some kind of retro rite of passage ritual, these flotsam are an insult to any working person, fully capable as they are of self-support yet furious that the world that owes them a living might not deign to support their polluting activities, like public urination and defecation, littering, and drug dealing. The hippie of today is as ludicrous as a Teddy Boy or a Mod, only at least those subcultures bathe.

Your reinforcement of the old and tired "us against them" argument is as dead as Pigpen himself. Give it a rest. Peace and love, man.

Sorry, Dianne

Regarding Senator Feinstein's statement that she will not back the Mitchell health care bill. As a loyal Democrat who votes in every election, I can state that if Feinstein's position on health care does not shift, I will not be backing her in November. I simply cannot bring myself to vote for a Republican, whatever the stripe.

I am an HIV positive person, uninsurable by the health industry because of this "preexisting condition." For me and many others, health care is an absolute necessity — not some adjunct issue to be tinkered with. Let's be frank — if it doesn't happen this year, it ain't gonna happen! Next year, Republicans will have greater control of Congress — and universal access to shaping the health care debate.

Senator Feinstein — don't take the votes of California's progressives for granted. Listen to and serve the constituency that helped get you elected. Otherwise, you can count on another senator in the GOP column — the junior member of the California delegation.

The comic Jordan

Events of this last week delineate the comic priorities of His Honor Frank Jordan — comic if absurdity for its own sake can amuse you.

The trouble on Muni finally came to a head, with three violent incidents in as many days. The mayor, sensing that these were truly unfortunate assaults — primarily to his image — that might finally arouse an apathetic public, predictably proclaimed that he would act firmly and increase police patrols.

There was a caveat, of course. It would take at least three months before recruits would be properly trained. Despite the fact that violence on Muni is hardly a recent development, Jordan had nothing in place to deal with it, was not the least prepared.

This same week, he placed on the ballot his "anti-lounging-on-the-sidewalk" measure. For this horribly pressing issue, he had his priorities well defined and his forces successfully mobilized. I believe he even had a speech dictated for him for this important development.

The snapshot couldn't be clearer. The big-money people backing Jordan don't ride the Muni, but they do stroll around commercial areas and hate to have their fine sensitivities put upon by the down-and-out. Moneyed sensitivities rate so much higher than safety when one needs money and backing to get reelected. And of course, if Jordan doesn't get reelected, how can he continue to do what he has been doing: sadly, virtually everything within his power and capabilities to affect the quality of life in this city. Send in the clowns.

Downtown's pawns

IT DOESN'T GET MUCH CLEARER than this. On Friday, Aug. 19, Mayor Jordan called his staff from San Diego, where he's on vacation, to announce that he will oppose any new taxes that might help close the final $10 million gap in the city budget. In the process he destroyed whatever last shreds remain of his "nice guy" image: The cuts his budget mandate would force are mean-spirited, brutal, and completely unnecessary. He also threw down a political gauntlet, setting the scene for one of the most dramatic single votes the Board of Supervisors has faced in years.

On Monday, Aug. 29, the supervisors will decide whether to defy the mayor and his downtown backers and pass a real estate transfer tax that would raise $9.6 million — or accept another round of devastating cuts in services. They'll tell us whose side they're really on, who they really represent — the corporate executives of the Committee on JOBS or the people of San Francisco.

The transfer-tax proposal is one of the only significant revenue-generating measures to emerge from this year's budget debate. It's a relatively minor tax on the sale of property, and if the increase passes, San Francisco will still have a lower rate than cities like Berkeley, Oakland, and Piedmont.

In other words, the transfer tax is hardly a radical measure, hardly a huge new burden on local business. It wouldn't begin to make downtown pay its fair share of the local tax burden; it wouldn't begin to shift the budget pain off the backs of the homeless, the sick, the dying, the needy.

The only credible argument we can see against the tax hike is that it's too small and too limited: The board should have gone after downtown with a more progressive payroll/gross receipts tax, a transit-assessment district, or any of a number of other taxes. As we reported last week, data collected by a national consulting firm shows that San Francisco has lower business taxes than a lot of comparable cities — and nobody in the Mayor's Office, the Chamber of Commerce, or the JOBS committee has been able to refute it.

At this point there's only one choice. The board needs to approve the transfer tax with a veto-proof eight-vote majority — and every supervisor who votes against it will be branded forever as a downtown pawn. ■

Clean up Pelosi's mess

REP. NANCY PELOSI proclaimed victory last week when the House of Representatives approved her bill to create a powerful quasi-government corporation to manage the new Presidio national park. But the truth is that her bill has been so badly mangled in the congressional process that it no longer does many of the things she promised. In fact, by the time the legislation emerges from the Senate, even staunch supporters may be facing a troubling question: What's the point of this bill?

Pelosi insisted that the measure, which would create a special "public-benefits corporation" to run the park, gave the Presidio operation tremendous financial flexibility. The corporation could lease property quickly, without following cumbersome government regulations, and (in theory) raise enough revenue to subsidize much of the park's high-priced renovations. It could borrow unlimited amounts of public money and save its own profits to cover future expenses.

But the House, with bipartisan support, eliminated the free access to borrowed money and put a cap on annual loans. Now Republican senators are saying that they are going to target the provision allowing the corporation to keep excess revenue at the end of the fiscal year, when most federal agencies have to return unspent allocations to the treasury.

If that amendment is successful, almost every financial argument for creating a private management entity for the Presidio will be eliminated.

Pelosi has dropped the ball on every good-government front. The corporation was supposed to be accountable to the public and Congress — but it isn't. The Golden Gate National Recreation Area Advisory Commission was supposed to play a key role in the park's future — but it's been relegated to "liaison" status. The Presidio was supposed to be free of inappropriate building uses — but Pelosi's legislation allows for uses that go against the Park Service's master plan.

So we're looking at a bill that does everything wrong and nothing right, which hardly seems like a victory. If Senators Feinstein and Boxer really care about the future of the Presidio, they should take the lead and move to kill this legislation now, before we're stuck with a world-class political disaster. ■

Planning's dirty secret

THE SAN FRANCISCO Planning Commission is quietly moving to consider a sweeping new policy that would eliminate hundreds of potential sites for new affordable housing. It looks like a bad idea from the start — and the commission's secretive process makes it worse.

The zoning changes that will come before the commission for preliminary discussion Aug. 25 would ban new housing in industrial areas. That clashes with the long-established progressive approach of mixed-use development, and it could close off parts of areas including the Mission, Bayview, and South of Market — where real estate prices are relatively cheap — to affordable-housing projects.

If there's a good reason for this sort of policy change, we haven't heard it yet — and the way the commission is proceeding, we may never get the chance. Major zoning revisions that conflict with the city's master plan normally require extensive environmental and economic review, with detailed studies and reports, plenty of hearings, and extensive public debate. That's a slow and cumbersome process; it's also one that works.

But as Jim Balderston reports on page 12, the planners apparently want to avoid all those hassles and sneak the rezoning in through the back door. Even Frank Jordan's commissioners should know better: This is San Francisco, where land-use issues are serious business and affordable housing is a broad-based community crusade. The commission should scrap this entire discussion and start again — without all the foolish secrecy. ■

CATTLE CALL AT THE NOT-O.K. CORRAL

Mexico: A cleaner election, but still not very fair

BY MEDEA BENJAMIN

IT LOOKS LIKE ANOTHER WIN for Mexico's ruling party, the Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI), which has managed to keep itself in power for 65 years. It's true that many reforms were made to make this election "cleaner" than previous ones: The government spent close to a billion dollars redoing the voter-registration list and issuing new voter credentials. The United Nations was called in to give technical assistance to ensure that the computer system would not "crash," as it did in the 1988 presidential elections when opposition candidate Cuauhtémoc Cárdenas was winning. For the first time, respected citizens were added to the Federal Electoral Institute to give it a more impartial voice. Thousands of Mexicans and hundreds of foreigners, including our 115-person Global Exchange delegation, were accredited by the government to be poll watchers.

These elections were an improvement in that there wasn't a lot of ballot-box stuffing, but they still weren't very fair. The PRI, which has been called the perfect dictatorship, is a tightly run party machine that seeps into the intimate aspects of its citizens' lives. You are free to vote as you please and your vote is supposed to be secret. But if you know what's good for you, you'll vote PRI.

Take a few examples we witnessed. A day before the elections, our monitors in Tlapa, Guerrero, reported that the government agency PROCAMPO was handing out checks from $100 to $200 to the local campesinos, or farmers, at the city hall. The campesinos were told that these subsidies would only continue if the PRI stayed in power.

In Chalco, in the state of Mexico, a woman waiting in line to vote took me aside and vented. "Two weeks ago I went to get a job at a milk factory in Tlanepantlan. I was told by the union there that in order to get the job I had to guarantee that I would vote for the PRI. Does that sound fair?"

Hundreds of people in Chalco were unable to vote on Sunday because the polling office ran out of ballots. People were very upset because they truly wanted to vote. But they were also upset, they told us, because they had to have their voter cards marked to show at their workplaces and their children's schools that they had voted. "More than anything, I am worried for my children," said an agitated Zolia Cortes Ramirez. "To get [my daughter] into school I have to prove that I voted." And who had Zolia planned to vote for? You guess.

The taxi driver who took me home from Chalco said that if he hadn't attended the closing rally for the PRI's campaign, he would have been docked five days' pay.

The previous day in a working-class neighborhood in Mexico City, another woman complained that to get her stall in the market, she was told she had to vote for the PRI.

Our monitors in Las Margaritas, Chiapas, reported that the thousands of people displaced by the fighting there were told that they might not keep getting food or shelter if they didn't vote for the PRI. In Zinacantan, Chiapas, the PRI told people that their water supply might be cut off if the PRI didn't win.

Need I go on? The PRI has a system as well-oiled as the old Chicago machine. For the "perfect dictatorship" to be transformed into a true democracy, there must be a greater separation between the party and government. The international press must look beyond the smiling faces casting their ballots on election day and probe into the ways the PRI continues to use subtle or not-so-subtle coercion to keep itself in power.

On the positive side, there is a strong, vibrant citizens' movement that has been emerging in Mexico, composed of groups of human-rights advocates, campesinos, women, environmental activists, etc. This movement came together to monitor these elections and will continue to pressure the PRI government both to become more democratic and to institute reforms to help the 18 million Mexicans living in extreme poverty. It is this movement that we should look to for the sign of a true democratic transformation in Mexico. ■

Medea Benjamin is codirector of the San Francisco-based Global Exchange, which organized a delegation to monitor the Aug. 21 Mexican elections.

Mr. Clean

BY TIM REDMOND

THE WAY THE PUNDITS IN WASHINGTON are talking these days, the biggest winner in the Fall of the House of Clinton is not the Republican Party. It's not Bob Dole, who can make Spiro Agnew look like a statesman, or Phil Gramm, whose blatant presidential ambitions make him look like a sleazy little hustler, or Newt Gingrich, who has always kind of looked like a twit.

It's not Congress, which has bungled the crime bill, screwed up the health care debate, ducked for cover on Rwanda and Haiti, and let Whitewater become a silly political circus. It's not the federal judiciary, which Judge Sirica elevated to godlike status in the Watergate era; this time the Whitewater special-prosecutor mess has turned the lofty judges into cheap partisan hacks.

No, the only major Washington figure who comes out of this summer with integrity intact, popularity rising, and a public image to die for is Clinton's official partner, Vice President Al Gore.

A recent study by the nonpartisan Center for Media and Public Affairs shows that roughly 60 percent of the national press coverage of Clinton has been negative; roughly 60 percent of the coverage of Gore has been positive. Which isn't terribly surprising: Most of the worst problems of the Clinton Administration have revolved around the president's "character" — his sex life, his personal finances, his indecision, his almost pathological inability to tell the truth. And on the character issue, the vice president looks like a political Mother Teresa.

The last Boy Scout

Al Gore was always a model kid. He studied hard, played football, married his high school sweetheart, and wore his hair short in college. When his draft notice arrived in 1969, he refused to ask his father, the powerful Tennessee senator, to pull any strings. He enlisted in the Army as a buck private and served his tour of duty in Vietnam.

In an administration plagued by lawyers and liars, Gore comes off as a refreshing voice of decency and truth. (Yeah, he inhaled; at this point, does anyone care?) He's clearly distancing himself from Clinton on Whitewater and the sexual harassment charges.

A lot of Washington insiders I've talked to say he's the Democrats' best hope; if Clinton doesn't win reelection, Gore is the clear, almost unassailable front-runner for the year 2000. In fact, some Democratic politicians even say (privately, way off the record) that if Clinton's popularity continues to decline, the president should consider stepping down after one term so Gore can take the top spot on the ticket in 1996.

But now that he's becoming Washington's Mr. Clean, I think it's worth dredging up a few serious blotches on that lovely political record.

Frankly, I don't care who the president sleeps with (as long as they're all consenting adults). I don't care what he smokes or drinks. I respect a lot of people who dodged the Vietnam draft, the same way I respect a lot of people who didn't. But I care a whole lot about the way the person in charge of this country responds when his political ambitions clash with his personal beliefs. And on that "character" issue, Al Gore doesn't do quite as well.

Ozone man

More than anything else these days, Gore portrays himself as an environmentalist, and he's written a best-selling book called Earth in the Balance. But I've written a book on environmental history, too, and I researched Gore's record carefully. And every single time he's played a pivotal role in a major environmental issue, he's put expediency first and principle last. I'll cite two painful examples:

- In 1979 Gore was one of the strongest congressional supporters of the Tellico Dam, a Tennessee Valley Authority project that became famous nationwide because of a tiny fish called the snail darter. The fish was never the real issue — the dam was stupid, wasteful, and economically indefensible. It destroyed more jobs than it created. It had no valid purpose in life except for the need of a huge bureaucratic agency to continue to justify its existence. It also gave Congress a unique, unprecedented opportunity to gut the historic Endangered Species Act — and Gore, who represented the Tellico region, never uttered a word of opposition.

- Three years ago Gore cast a decisive vote in support of one of the worst land-rape laws in American history, the General Mining Law of 1872. The law allows giant mining companies to claim public land for almost nothing; last year, a Canadian outfit seized 1,949 acres in Nevada, containing $10 billion worth of gold, for a total price of less than $10,000.

Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt is fighting hard to modify or repeal the law, but it's still bogged down in Congress. What the administration never mentions is that the issue would be long over if it weren't for Gore: A repeal bill passed the House in 1991, but lost in the Senate, 47-46 — with Gore voting against repeal.

I'm not here to bash Al Gore, who would be a far better president than Dole, Gramm, or even, I suspect, Bill Clinton. But let's be honest: On the tough ones, he's already sold his soul. ■

MEDIA

Is KRON for sale?

Reports spark new fears of one-paper town

A MEDIA INDUSTRY trade journal reported last week that Chronicle Publishing Co. might sell KRON to media mogul Rupert Murdoch, setting off a new round of fevered speculation about the future of four prominent local media outlets — and raising new fears that San Francisco will soon be a one-newspaper town.

The future of the San Francisco Chronicle, the San Francisco Examiner, KRON, and KTVU have been up in the air since media-industry bible Variety reported Aug. 15 that Murdoch was poised to buy Chronicle Publishing's valuable San Francisco station. Chronicle Publishing also is entertaining bids from cable-TV giants TCI and Time Warner for its cable subsidiary, Western Communications.

According to Variety, Western Communications "could go for more than $700 million." KRON-TV, meanwhile, has a market value of between $300 million and $400 million, Variety reported.

Although the Variety report has made headlines nationwide, the San Francisco Chronicle hasn't published a word about it.

The sales would set off a media scramble in the Bay Area.

If Murdoch buys KRON, the station would replace Oakland's KTVU as the Bay Area affiliate for Murdoch's Fox network. KTVU would then more than likely become the Bay Area's NBC affiliate.

But the biggest questions involve the $1 billion in new revenue Chronicle Publishing would have after the sale — and the effect that this new buying power would have on the future of San Francisco's two major daily newspapers.

Several scenarios have emerged. A leading theory is that the Chronicle parent company is amassing cash to buy the Examiner, meaning that it would have the San Francisco market to itself and could eliminate costly redundant jobs that are mandated by the Joint Operating Agreement (JOA), which governs the shared production, advertising, and distribution staffs of the Chronicle and Examiner.

"As soon as you do away with the redundancies of the JOA, such as two pressroom crews, two composing rooms, and the like, you are going to be in the black," one longtime newspaper executive familiar with the Chronicle's operations told the Bay Guardian (speaking on condition of anonymity).

Nan Tucker McEvoy, chair of the board and the largest single stockholder at Chronicle Publishing, said in 1993 that the Chronicle would be sold "over my dead body." She seemed to back down a bit earlier this year, when she responded to a local TV reporter's question about a possible Chronicle sale by saying, "We shall see."

But McEvoy has since reaffirmed her earlier position. About five weeks ago, she told reporter M.L. Stein of Editor and Publisher magazine that the paper would not be sold.

Industry analyst John Morton says he believes her. "Nan Tucker McEvoy told me that nothing is for sale except what they have said is for sale," Morton, an analyst with the Washington-based institutional stock brokerage of Lynch, Jones and Ryan, told the Bay Guardian.

But there's an alternative scenario in which the Examiner buys a stripped-down Chronicle Publishing. That option is given credence by the fact that the Examiner's owner, Hearst Corporation, offered $800 million for Chronicle Publishing just last year. And in March, reports in the San Jose Mercury News of an acrimonious Chronicle Publishing board meeting further fueled rumors of a possible sale: the reports included quotes from unidentified board members who complained about McEvoy's stewardship of the company.

In either case, according to a newspaper executive close to JOA operations, Chronicle Publishing's sale of its cable systems and KRON-TV would have a profound effect on local print journalism.

"The one thing that's really sure here, regardless of the scenario, is that if the sales of those properties go through, we're moving toward becoming a one-newspaper town," he said.

Examiner executive editor Phil Bronstein said the dealings of Chronicle Publishing could play out in any number of ways. "There are a lot of moving parts here," Bronstein told the Bay Guardian. "There are 15 or 1,500 possible scenarios." But one possibility Bronstein did not rule out is that the Examiner might be sold. "It's one of the scenarios," he said. "But that doesn't mean it couldn't go any one of the other ways as well."

On Aug. 25 the San Francisco Labor Forum will sponsor a discussion about the ongoing labor crisis at the Chronicle and Examiner. Panelists include fired union organizer Doraine Vaught, Newspaper Guild negotiator Larry Hatfield, and media critic Barbara Johnson. The panel will meet at S.F. State's Downtown Center, 425 Market, 7 p.m. $4 donation. For more information, phone (415) 566-9012.

Jordan's tax flip-flop

The mayor caves in to big business again

SAN FRANCISCO MAYOR Frank Jordan announced last week that he won't raise taxes to close the $9.8 million budget deficit — even though his aides told the Board of Supervisors that he would support an increase — and he has offered no alternative solutions to the deficit crisis. Jordan's flip-flop may lead to the most divisive political battles in years, pitting the interests of big downtown business against those of just about everyone else.

Union representatives, city officials, the supervisors, and neighborhood groups are still reeling from what they see as a blatant flip-flop by the mayor. As recently as early Friday morning, City Hall aides contend, Jordan staffers were telling people that the mayor had decided to back not only a partial increase in the proposed real estate transfer tax, but also in the utility user's tax.

Many believe that Jordan's change of mind was the result of

News, Notes & Comment

Landlocked: Deborah Keipp moved to Mendocino to give her daughter Ruby a better life; now Ruby's father is suing for custody and to keep Ruby in Berkeley where she was born.

Custody crossfire

PARENTAL RIGHTS The battle over a sick daughter's care may be another example of the trend against maternal preference.

By Ann Givens

IN THE LOBBY of a Berkeley radio station, a tiny owl-eyed girl plays a game of "hospital" with two of her friends. The girl swoons, dramatically touching the back of one hand to her forehead, then giggles as she pretends to faint into the ready arms of her friend.

But for eight-year-old Ruby Trieste, illness is not all make-believe. Just over a year ago, a previously undetected tumor ruptured in her brain. Although the mass was significantly reduced through surgery, Ruby's mother says that she is expected to live for just about 10 years.

The complications in Ruby's life only began with that diagnosis — she is now at the center of a custody battle whose outcome may have implications for families nationwide.

Last year Ruby's mother, Deborah Keipp, decided that her daughter's health and education would benefit by a move to a small rural town in Mendocino County. In January Ruby's father Lawrence Trieste (who was never married to Keipp), filed for primary custody of his daughter, claiming that his daughter shouldn't have to leave her Berkeley school just because Keipp wants to move. If Trieste wins his legal challenge, the case will be yet another example of a continuing trend away from maternal preference in custody cases, a trend that was recently highlighted when a Michigan mother lost custody because she had placed her daughter in child care while she attended college classes.

Mary Ann Mason, an associate professor of social welfare at UC Berkeley and a lawyer who advocates maternal preference in determining child custody, sees similarities between the Keipp-Trieste case and the recent Michigan custody battle.

"In both of these cases, the mothers were acting as mothers should," Mason told the Bay Guardian. "They were caring for their children in the best way they could. They had to work, they had to move ... and they were punished for it."

Lawrence Trieste declined to comment on the case, but most details are undisputed.

Ruby Trieste was born on Oct. 24, 1986. Although her tumor went undetected for the first six years of her life, Ruby was developmentally slow from birth. Today Ruby is the size of a child only half her age.

The relationship between Keipp and Trieste ended eight months after Ruby was born. The mother — who was at the radio station to be interviewed about the case — claims in court documents that the father showed little interest in caring for Ruby during her infancy and that, although they had never finalized a formal custody agreement, she had maintained sole custody of Ruby until the girl was three. Ruby's father then began to take a more active role in her care, says Keipp, but she claims that she was always the primary caregiver.

Last October, shortly after Ruby's operation, Keipp decided that it was in Ruby's best interest to move from Berkeley (where Ruby had lived since birth) to a smaller town. Keipp thought that Ruby would benefit from the one-on-one educational opportunities offered in the rural community of Mendocino. Additionally, expensive Berkeley rents had been causing Keipp — whose full-time care of Ruby has prevented her from working regular hours — to move frequently. In Mendocino Keipp worked out an arrangement whereby she would provide 20 hours a week of child care for a local family in exchange for being allowed to live with Ruby rent-free in a cabin on nearly 10 acres of private property.

When Keipp first moved to Mendocino in October of last year, she left Ruby at Trieste's Berkeley home so Ruby wouldn't have to leave school in the middle of a semester. In the meantime, Ruby's father got married to another woman and in January sued for permanent custody on the grounds that Ruby should be able to stay in her present school in Berkeley.

The Keipp-Trieste case will be heard on Sept. 7, the day Ruby is scheduled to return to school. Legal observers say that the outcome could set a legal precedent for future custody battles, but Keipp told the Bay Guardian that her only concern is for her daughter's well-being. "I just want to share my daughter's life with her in an environment that will be the best for her." ■ politically powerful downtown interests, who dictated to Jordan that they would stand for no new taxes, even though San Francisco is far behind cities such as Detroit, Cleveland, and Newark in the amount it taxes business. Many in City Hall single out the powerful Committee on JOBS, a politically driven consortium of executives from the city's largest corporate employers, as the prime culprit.

"We're appalled, we can't figure out what Jordan has in mind," June Gutfleisch, legislative aide to Supervisor Sue Bierman, told the Bay Guardian. "I think that the Committee on JOBS and downtown interests convinced him where his future is."

Jordan handed down his new-taxes pronouncement unexpectedly on Friday afternoon, when he phoned his staff while on vacation in San Diego. As late as that morning, Jordan aides were still shopping around the idea of raising the transfer tax, albeit by only half the amount that the board's Budget Committee had recommended.

Last week the Bay Guardian reported that, despite constant complaints from big-business leaders that they are burdened by high taxes, San Francisco is not even on the top 10 list of the most heavily taxed cities nationwide. But the antitax political campaign nevertheless has effectively eliminated the possibility of instituting new revenue-generating measures.

It is clear, however, that the JOBS agenda has little support among neighborhood leaders — or, increasingly, among political leaders. Last week the Bay Guardian sent to every candidate in this year's supervisorial elections a questionnaire in which we asked what revenue measures they supported.

All of the candidates who responded — including Tom Ammiano, Sylvia Courtney, Cesar Ascarrunz, Arthur Jackson, Maria Martinez, Carole Migden, and Josh Newman — supported not only the real estate transfer tax, but also creation of a Downtown Transit Assessment District, which would force downtown companies to pay a fairer share of Muni transit costs.

"I don't know where the mayor is coming from on this one," Tom Ammiano told the Bay Guardian. "It didn't work for George Bush, and it's not going to work here."

Supporters of the transfer tax say they have seven solid board votes in favor of the tax, one vote more than they need to approve it at the board's Aug. 29 meeting and one shy of what they need to override Jordan's anticipated veto. Supervisors Bill Maher, Annemarie Conroy, Barbara Kaufman, and Willie Kennedy are expected to oppose the measure.

But supervisor and likely mayoral contender Carole Migden criticized Jordan for waiting until "the 11th hour" to notify City Hall that he was backing off tax proposals as an option to close the budget gap. "The people require a balanced budget," Migden told the Bay Guardian. "If [Jordan] thinks he's going to cut services to the poorest people in the city, he's got a fight on his hands."

Martin Espinoza

"They are casting the net very broadly," Casenave said. "They are talking about prohibiting housing in industrial areas where there is already housing and where there's a strong potential for new housing construction."

Casenave said that the policy options would be given to the commission for future consideration and adoption but won't be voted on at that meeting.

"What they are doing is an end run around the housing element of the city's master plan," said Casenave. "They want to adopt this through the back door."

Blazej did not return repeated Bay Guardian phone calls on the matter.

CITY PLANNING

Housing alert!

Plan would cut prime sites for low-cost homes

THE SAN FRANCISCO Planning Commission is quietly considering a citywide ban on housing construction in industrial areas — the type of neighborhoods where new affordable housing can be most easily built — in a move that housing activists claim is a violation of the city's master plan.

"This would radically change the city's housing-construction policies," Rene Casenave of the Council of Community Housing Organizations, a coalition affordable-housing developers, told the Bay Guardian. "This is a de facto rezoning without the city going through the proper process. There is no environmental impact report, no scrutiny, no discussion."

Land-use lawyer Sue Hestor said that official rezoning would require a number of complicated steps. "You have to go through environmental review, an extended notice procedure," Hestor told the Bay Guardian. "It's generally a pain in the ass."

According to Casenave, Planning Director Lu Blazej has asked his staff to prepare a report for the Planning Commission's Aug. 25 meeting that would lay out options for altering the city's housing policies. One option would be a new policy to prohibit housing construction in industrial areas throughout the city.

OAKLAND

Sneak attack

City rent laws are in danger, say officials

THE LIMITED rent regulation that exists in Oakland is now endangered, according to some members of the city's Residential Rent Arbitration Board (RRAB).

Inordinate delays in amending the program's ordinance and the recent reassignment of the board's staff to work on another housing program have board members worried that the rent program "is being indirectly sunsetted," board chair Richard Cowan told the Bay Guardian.

Those concerns prompted a special meeting of board members on Aug. 11 to discuss the future of the rent-arbitration program. Board member Doug Haffer said he was upset because he hadn't been informed that the board's staff was being reassigned by city officials to work on the city's First-Time Homebuyers Program. In fact, Haffer didn't find out until he made a routine call to rent board office and heard the phone answered, "Residential Rent Arbitration/First-Time Homebuyers Program." Haffer said board members should have been consulted about changes in staff assignments, adding, "This is an affront to the board, the rent ordinance, Oakland tenants, and the City Council."

Reassigning staff was an irresponsible and unethical act by city housing officials, Haffer said, as well as a violation of the ordinance that established the board and staff positions to run the rent-arbitration program. If rent-board staffers have extra time because of a lack of cases, they should be working on outreach to Oakland tenants — many of whom don't know about the city's rent program — especially non-English-speaking tenants, whom he called the most vulnerable. Without such publicity, the board will continue to get few petitions and hear few cases, he said.

Roy Schwyer, deputy director of housing for Oakland's Office of Housing and Neighborhood Development, told the board that his department had received the First-Time Homebuyers assignment just a couple of days before Haffer's call, but that recent budget cuts had left him with no extra staff to do the work, so he asked the rent-arbitration staffers to help out. The dual duties are only temporary, until he can hire new staff, Schwyer said, adding that there was no intent to subvert the rent-arbitration program or downplay the board's role.

Haffer also complained that a board subcommittee had submitted amendments to the original ordinance back in January, but that the City Attorney's Office had yet to respond to them. One amendment would reduce the annual allowable rent increase from 6 to 3 percent, to be more in line with the recent lower inflation rates. "The delay means another year of higher increases will be passed on to tenants," Haffer said.

Jonee Grassi, an assistant to the city attorney, apologized for not having finished the review, citing budget cuts and increased workloads for the delays. She promised to provide legal advice on at least most of the amendments at the next RRAB meeting.

The meeting ended with the board's passing a motion to create a more creative and multilingual outreach program, and a request that staff leaders report on changes in employee responsibilities at its next meeting, on Sept. 8 at 7 p.m. at the Lakeside Garden Center, 666 Bellevue, Oakl.

Anaïs Nin letters given to USF rare-book library

THERE'S GREAT NEWS for local fans of the writer Anaïs Nin — almost 3,000 of her unpublished letters and other writings were donated last week by her brother to the University of San Francisco's Gleeson Library. According to Joaquin Nin-Culmell (Nin's brother and a Berkeley resident), the collection includes a letter from Henry Miller to Anaïs and a two-page novel outline, as well as assorted postcards and notes.

The collection also includes extensive and revealing family correspondence. "Everything that she wrote to our mother, from when Anaïs first started learning how to write as a child, our mother kept," Nin-Culmell told the Bay Guardian.

Also included are letters from Nin to her husband, her psychoanalyst, and her brother. Most of the letters are in French, with some in Spanish and some in English. Nin-Culmell decided it was time to donate the collection after his previous home was threatened by the Berkeley fire.

"The advantage of giving them to Gleeson Library is that one can look at the letters but [because of the system the library uses] cannot touch them," says Nin-Culmell, a retired UC Berkeley music professor who chose the Gleeson Library because of his friendship with the Rev. William J. Monihan, USF's director of library relations. "This is a way of taking care of them."

Anaïs Nin died in 1977 at the age of 74. She began writing her famous diaries when she was 11 and went on to write more than a dozen novels and collections of stories. At press time, officials at USF's rare-book library were still establishing guidelines regarding who will be eligible to study the collection. But Kimberly Burns, events coordinator for A Clean Well-Lighted Place for Books, told the Bay Guardian that donation of the collection is a major contribution to San Francisco's literary culture.

"Nin's work is timeless, and I think that's why her work sells consistently for us," said Burns. "Plus, her writing is so subtle and so hot."

PRESIDIO

Park plan gutted

House strips Pelosi's bill of funding options

AS CONGRESS makes more and more changes to Rep. Nancy Pelosi's legislation to convert the 218-year-old Presidio military post to a national park, there are fewer arguments that support her insistence that a private corporation must run the park.

Pelosi's bill to create a quasi-governmental "public-benefits corporation" to manage the proposed multimillion-dollar park was approved by the House last week — but only after being gutted of vital federal-funding provisions.

Sources in Washington say that a second assault against the corporation's financing will probably be launched in the Senate, where members are even more concerned that the corporation will be able to circumvent normal federal budget procedures.

Most federal agencies get an annual funding appropriation and must return to the government any money they didn't spend during that fiscal year. Pelosi argues that one of the key benefits of creating a public-benefits corporation is that it is allowed to roll over surplus revenues from year to year. But that provision is being targeted in the Senate and, if conservative senators are successful, Pelosi's pro-corporation argument would no longer be valid.

Pelosi declined to return Bay Guardian phone inquiries but told the San Francisco Chronicle that she hopes to eliminate from the Senate bill the House amendment that would require the corporation to abide by restrictions in congressional appropriations whenever it tries to borrow money from the federal Treasury. That amendment, authored by Rep. Bill Archer (R-Texas), would have the effect of pitting Presidio development projects against the yearly funding requests of other National Park Service programs. Democratic representative and House Ways and Means Committee acting chair Sam Gibbons won another amendment that put a $150 million cap on the corporation's borrowing capacity.

Both the Archer and Gibbons amendments had bipartisan support, and no attempt was made to oppose them on the House floor. Republicans say it's unlikely that Pelosi will be able to undo the House amendments in the Senate. And if she does, a key congressional aide told the Bay Guardian, "We'll try to kill the whole thing."

Despite the amendments that make the corporation more financially accountable to Congress, the park proposal is still seen on Capitol Hill as secretive and without enough public and government accountability. A Bay Guardian review of the current legislation as it was approved by the House found that:

- The legislation still contains strong incentives for the National Park Service to maximize revenues by charging tenants high rents.

- The bill still allows for land and building uses that are inconsistent with the Park Service's own General Management Plan.

- The financial relationship between the Presidio's operating corporation and the U.S. Treasury — which probably would be driven by the credit worthiness of development projects in the park — would likely lead to higher rents that would squeeze out smaller, nonprofit tenants.

"There are so many financial restraints on the trust that they'll have to continually figure out ways to increase revenue through rents," Joel Ventresca, head of the Preserve the Presidio Campaign, told the Bay Guardian.

JOBS pays big bucks for City Hall support

THE LATEST campaign-contribution totals for the Board of Supervisors are in, and they provide an insightful behind-the-scenes look at how much money the Committee on JOBS is throwing around City Hall to cultivate support for its big-business political agenda.

JOBS is a consortium of the city's most powerful business leaders and was a truly generous political benefactor during the first six months of the year. JOBS board members, their corporations, and their employees combined to contribute more than $120,000 to supervisors, according to records on file with the registrar of voters.

Among the biggest contributors were lawyers at the firm Pillsbury Madison & Sutro (who combined to give $14,600), executives of PG&E ($11,650), and the Gap ($9,850). But nearly all of the two dozen companies that compose the Committee on JOBS put at least a few thousand dollars into the campaign hopper.

The four incumbent supervisors up for reelection in November were the beneficiaries of the most JOBS "juice."

Carole Migden pulled in $52,525 from companies and executives affiliated with JOBS members. The most generous contributors were Pillsbury, Madison lawyers, who gave $7,900; PG&E executives, who pitched in $5,500, the Gap and its employees, who contributed more than $5,000; Transamerica, which accounted for nearly $5,000; and Pacific Telesis, which gave more than $3,000. Migden has sided with JOBS in voting down a new payroll tax, but wavered from the JOBS line on charter reform and creation of a downtown transit assessment district.

Annemarie Conroy, who has joined JOBS in working to eliminate the Small Business Advisory Commission, placed second in the JOBS dollar derby with a total of $31,900. Wells Fargo people apparently liked her a lot, heading up the list of the biggest contributions with $3,800; Chevron gave $3,500, and Bank of America donated $2,200. Board newcomer Susan Leal, who was appointed by Mayor Frank Jordan to serve out the term of Roberta Achtenberg and faces her first election contest in November, did almost as well as Conroy: Her JOBS-connected contributions totaled $30,700.

Kevin Shelley received some $7,700 in JOBS money, most of it coming from developers Walter and Doug Shorestein and the Gap's Don and Doris Fisher, who all submitted $500 each. Supervisors Sue Bierman, Tom Hsieh, Bill Maher and Barbara Kaufman received no JOBS-related money (though JOBS ally Kaufman benefited handsomely during the previous filing period).

Ethics advance

City names interim director to police the politicians

THE CITY'S NEW Ethics Commission is one step closer to being fully up to speed with the appointment last week of long-time health-services administrator Harry Joel as the panel's interim executive director. The former vice president for human resources at California Pacific Medical Center and director of employee relations at French Hospital and Medical Center was named on Aug. 11 to play the important role of establishing administrative guidelines for the commission while a national search is conducted to hire a permanent director.

"My charge is to work with the five commissioners and try to get the administrative aspects of the Ethics Commission organized," Joel told the Bay Guardian. "I'll probably be in the position for between 60 and 90 days. Interviews with candidates for the permanent job will probably begin in mid-September."

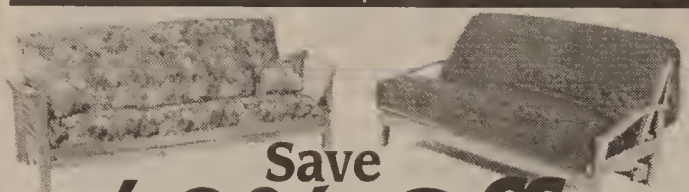

Advocates of ethics reform say that the executive director job is particularly important. Voters gave the commission a mandate to investigate violations of city laws governing campaign financing, lobbying, conflicts of interest, and general governmental ethics. The role of executive director, according to language of the ordinance, is to "be the chief executive of the department" with "the power to appoint auditors and investigators" and "appoint and remove other employees." That means the director will be the day-to-day boss of the commission and its investigations, while the five commissioners consider the larger issues of what may or may not constitute a violation of ethics law.

Interim commission chair Camille Hamilton Pating hailed Joel's appointment. "The commission is eager to get started in its role of improving government ethics in San Francisco, and the hiring of Harry Joel is an important first step," said Pating. "His extensive experience directing start-up organizations will help this commission get up and running."

The Fifth Column

Collignon falls on his sword

BY STEVE STALLONE

IT WAS THE NOBLE THING TO DO, I suppose, but reality did give him a little push. Last week, Berkeley City Council member Fred Collignon announced his withdrawal from the mayoral race. Collignon said in a press statement that he was withdrawing to "preserve the unity of the moderate coalition." With both he and fellow conservative councilmember Shirley Dean running against progressive candidate and former councilmember Don Jelinek, Collignon said his campaign had "a potential to fracture the moderate cause."

Collignon declined to talk with me by press time, but it is clear that he did not abandon his yearlong bid for mayor with only two and a half months to go before the November election just because it was the honorable thing to do. He recognized the ignominious defeat that faced him.

In Berkeley's fractured political world, Collignon usually supports the agenda of pro-landlord and pro-downtown business interests, although sometimes with liberal qualms. Both he and Dean — the matron of Berkeley's conservative politics — declared their intentions to run for mayor more than a year ago when it appeared that then-mayor Loni Hancock would get a Clinton administration appointment early enough in her term to force a special election. During that time Collignon's campaign tried to stake out a center position, cutting a middle road between the right and left while painting Dean as a right-wing ideologue. Still, the two candidates drew support from the same constituency, and there had long been talk of one having to drop out. (Collignon was willing to defer to the compromise caretaker mayor, Jeffrey Leiter; Dean was not.)

But Collignon's decision, coming so late in his campaign, makes it appear that his withdrawal decision came because an accumulation of factors made a victory seem improbable, if not impossible. The council's other two conservative members, Mary Wainwright and Betty Olds, are not only backing Dean but are also serving as nominal cochairs of her campaign. The board of the Berkeley Democratic Club (the protoparty formation for the pro-business, pro-real estate faction), recently endorsed Dean over Collignon as well.

With Wainwright and Olds delivering Districts 2 and 6 (respectively) for Dean, handpicked successor Diane Bauer running for Dean's old District 5 seat, and Linda Powell campaigning in District 4 (Dean has contributed "less than $50" to Powell's campaign, but has not officially endorsed her), Collignon was without an allied candidate running in districts that covered half the city. All this added up to a lack of money and a hemorrhaging campaign. Collignon found out the hard way that, just like with the city's rent board, when Berkeley's political right smells blood, they go for it.

Just how hurt Collignon is by all this is not clear. In the message he left on my answering machine as we played phone tag, he made a reference to "not wanting to say anything inappropriate." Comments in his press release were very calculated and measured, with Collignon saying, "I am confident that Shirley Dean will incorporate some of my ideas into her campaign." But he added, "I also hope that both [Dean's and Jelinek's] campaigns avoid the extremism that has become commonplace in Berkeley politics." And nowhere in the statement can you find the words "I endorse Dean." (Dean told me Collignon supports her, but acknowledged she didn't have a signed endorsement card from him.)

While calling Collignon's move "a statesmanlike thing to do," Dean said it wouldn't really affect her campaign, but would both give voters a clear choice between her and Jelinek and make a runoff election much less likely. (There are two other candidates, People's Park activists Michael Delacour and William Anderson, on the ballot. Four years ago, Delacour's relatively small number of supporters still were enough to help force a runoff between major candidates Hancock and Fred Weekes.)

Although the lower voter turnout of a December runoff would likely hurt a progressive, Jelinek minimized the significance of Collignon's withdrawal. But he said that he and Collignon did "slightly compete along the edges of the middle" for support. And Jelinek says he has made some gains among those voters.

"They're calling me on a regular basis," Jelinek told me last week. "I won't name groups now, but I'm meeting with one of the major groups tonight. They've been calling and saying, 'We've been backing Fred and we hate Shirley. We want to see if we can learn to love you.'"

At the same time, Jelinek is crowing about "the nice cross-section of the progressive community" backing him. U.S. Rep. Ron Dellums convened a special meeting of his endorsement committee to officially endorse Jelinek in time to get on his ballot statement. Jelinek also has the support of Berkeley Citizen Action stalwarts such as councilmember Maudelle Shirek, former mayor Gus Newport, and BCA defectors Loni Hancock and councilmember Linda Maio, as well as the council's Green Party member, Dona Spring.

Quipped Jelinek with characteristic confidence, "I'm hoping Shirley follows Fred's example." ■

REPRODUCTIVE RIGHTS S.F. General doctors are testing RU-486 to reduce abortions and expand birth-control options, but not all pro-choice activists are happy. By Neva Chonin

On a recent Tuesday morning, Dr. Philip Darney took a rare break at San Francisco General Hospital's Family Planning Clinic. As clinic director and a University of California at San Francisco professor of OB/GYN and reproductive sciences, Darney spent Monday performing abortions for low-income women, many of them from the Mission District neighborhood surrounding the hospital. Wednesday, and probably Saturday, would be spent the same way.

"We don't want to keep women waiting too long," said Darney, a soft-spoken man with graying hair who tempers his institutional-white jacket with a red bow tie and has the reassuring air of a family doctor.

S.F. General performs 1,000 abortions every year. Now Darney and his colleagues are studying a way to reduce that number. In the process, they are making medical history.

San Francisco General is the only site in North America participating in a series of clinical trials of the controversial French drug mifepristone, better known as RU-486. Initiated by the World Health Organization (WHO) in May, the study will test a total of 2,100 women at 14 sites worldwide, with 150 women involved at S.F. General.

The trial is testing RU-486 as a postcoital (morning-after) contraceptive, rather than as its more widely known application, an "abortifacient" (abortion-inducer).

The tests come at a pivotal time for reproductive rights in America. Increasing violence at abortion clinics has left health professionals murdered and women intimidated and afraid to seek abortion services. Court challenges continue to threaten a woman's right to choose. RU-486 could secure that right and provide a privacy that truly gives women freedom to make up their own minds about whether or not to have a child.

At the same time, though, even some reproductive-rights advocates are criticizing the study. RU-486, they say, costs far more than existing "morning after" pills, potentially putting it out of the reach of low-income women. Some critics go a step further, arguing that better "morning after" options could undermine contraception efforts and encourage women to engage in unsafe sex.

Preventing abortions

Dr. David Grimes, UCSF's chief of OB/GYN and reproductive sciences, is the principal investigator for the trial. Grimes, who conducted some of the first studies of RU-486 while at the University of Southern California in the 1980s, said that S.F. General's reputation in fertility-control research and his personal contacts with the World Health Organization contributed to the hospital's selection as a test site. The goal of the current trial, he said, is twofold: to determine the lowest effective dose of RU-486 that will safely induce bleeding, and to show that the drug can extend the window of opportunity to avoid becoming pregnant for up to five days after unprotected sex (as opposed to the 72-hour window of other birth-control pills).

But Grimes is quick to stress that abortion politics should have no bearing on the tests. "The important thing to understand is that this drug prevents the need for abortion," said Grimes. "That's the irony — that the pill associated with abortion can be used to prevent abortion." The drug, he added, also can be used to treat endocrine disorders, breast cancer, and brain tumors, and has fewer side effects than pills containing estrogen.

Women participating in S.F. General's trials remain in close touch with the staff. "Follow-up is important in a trial, not only to find out how the drug affects their health, but how they feel about it," said Darney. "They appreciate the fact that we ask, 'How's this going for you? How does it compare with other contraceptives? What does your family or partner think of it? How has it affected your sex life?' Some of the families we get to know well. We always welcome partners and children."

Cindy Klaisle, a registered nurse and coinvestigator for the study who has conducted contraceptive and abortion trials at S.F. General for 12 years, further explained the procedure. Once women qualify, she said, "we give them the medication, then have them come back to see us seven to ten days after the date of their next expected menstrual period. At that time, we do a pregnancy test and ask about any kinds of episodes of bleeding or spotting they might have had, whether they've had intercourse, and what they did for birth control."

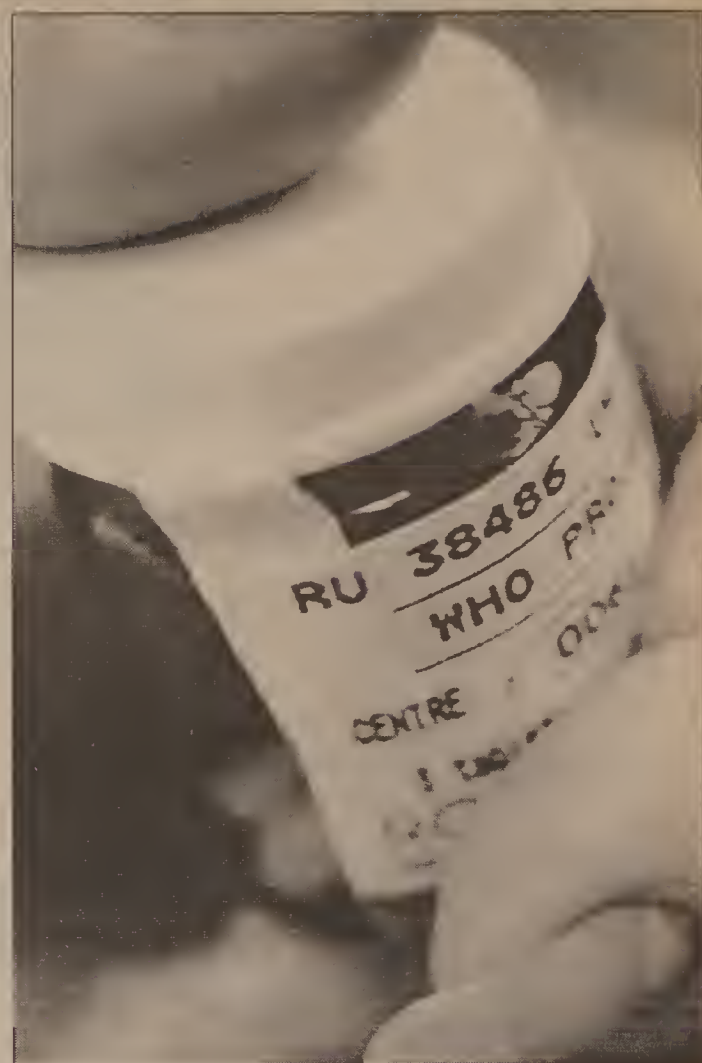

Although the clinic has been inundated by calls from women wanting to volunteer, Klaisle said strict screening has made recruitment a slow process. Eligible women must be over 18 and healthy, have a regular menstrual cycle, and have engaged in unprotected intercourse in the previous five days. Additional factors involving birth control and medical history are also considered.

The S.F. General research team has so far found only 20 women who fit the study's requirements. Darney acknowledges that the criteria are exhaustive, but insists restrictions are necessary. He points out that the study protocol was determined by the WHO's Human Reproduction Program in Geneva, with each site worldwide following identical testing procedures. The trials are scheduled to run for one year, but local testing will continue until the target of 150 subjects is reached.

How high a price?

Not surprisingly, Operation Rescue and other antiabortion groups have condemned the research. But pro-choice advocates have also expressed concerns.

Anna Runkle, communications manager for Planned Parenthood's

Free choice? RU-486 is finally being tested in this country, but the controversy continues.

Shasta-Diablo branch, said she worries that RU-486 will carry a prohibitively high price tag. "I've heard that a dose of RU-486 costs about $200," she told the Bay Guardian, noting that Planned Parenthood offers another type of morning-after pill (and an exam) for as little as $30. "That's an important cost difference to many women."

Darney said that the price will ultimately be determined by the manufacturer. "We don't know what it will cost when it's finally marketed in the U.S., but the hope is that it will be cheaper than it is in France, where it's priced like a surgical abortion," he said. Added Grimes, "It would be a cruel hoax on American women to finally have RU-486 available, but inaccessible because of price."

Linci Comy, director of the Women's Choice Clinic in Oakland, condemns the study as "ridiculous and totally separate from what international research has already shown to be the best use of RU-486. It's been proven effective in terminating pregnancy," she told the Bay Guardian. "I feel that it should be available and accessible to American women as an abortifacient, period."

Calling the morning-after pill "an option of desperation," Comy contends that the current study could set a dangerous example by encouraging women to engage in unprotected sex. "That attitude is going to kill women, who are the fastest growing group of HIV-positive people."

Grimes protests that HIV is "a totally unrelated issue. It's anti-intellectual, antiscientific, and anti-humanitarian to say that once we have one use for a drug, we shouldn't explore other potential uses."

Added Darney: "Having women come in for the morning-after pill gives us an opportunity to educate them on condom use and HIV. Everyone leaves the clinic with a purseful of condoms."

Although Darney concedes that testing RU-486 as a contraceptive "is a pretty poor substitute for studying it as an abortifacient," he noted that abortion studies will begin in the fall under the auspices of the Population Council, a private nonprofit group in New York that now holds the patent for RU-486.

Antiabortion disturbances are rare at San Francisco General, but clinic staff remain on guard. "People who work in abortion clinics put up with a lot," he said, "and most of us are certainly political activists." But Darney dismisses charges that personal activism could compromise scientific objectivity.

"We do the science in the right way," he said, "although for most of us there's a very important political as well as scientific objective — to give women a choice for reproductive health." ■

Recruitment for S.F. General's RU-486 trials is ongoing. For information or to volunteer, call (415) 502-0299.

HAVANA, CUBA — The most common way to refer to Fidel Castro here is simply to stroke one's chin, in reference to the old man's beard. Cubans explain, somewhat tongue-in-cheek, that they don't want to be overheard saying El Señor's name for fear of being suspected of plotting counterrevolution. To be sure, freedom of speech here is limited to idle conversation and private grumbling.

"No soap for four months," Ramon said, flipping the pages back to the last time an entry appeared beside japon. The pages showed that Ramon's family had gotten no meat or fish all year; no cooking oil or cleaning products for several months; only part of their allotment of rice each month; and occasional beans, eggs, and fruit. The only products

Tourism is expected to surpass sugar this year as the island's highest-earning industry, bringing thousands of foreign visitors and hundreds of millions of dollars each year. But the ramifications

Still, Cuban society seems far from divided. That people are surviving the "Special Period" by working together may illustrate the revolution's last great act of general solidarity. For most Cubans, neither of the state's economies — peso- or dollar-based — is sufficient, so they've built a third: La bolsa negra. The Cuban black market is a massive, largely clandestine phenomenon that purveys almost every commodity Cubans cannot find in the official peso market and cannot afford in the dollar market. The most important players are the people who produce food: the dairy farmers who are allowed to

Inside the supermarket, checkout lines run halfway back the store, except for diplomats, who have their own express line and enjoy a 40 percent discount on goods. Ordinary

So instead, Cubans continue to reinvent the concept of comfort, turning stale bread into toast, grapefruit rind into meat substitute, and bicycles into the family car. Ramon shook his disposable Bic lighter. "I have to get it refilled," he said, pointing to the bottom, where a neighbor had drilled a hole, refilled the lighter, and replugged it. "Nothing is ever broken here, it only needs to be fixed." ■

Daniel Johnson is a radio and print reporter who is currently studying law at UC Berkeley. He spent 10 days in Havana in July, leaving just days before a string of ferryboat-jackings by people wanting to leave the country began. Since then, Cubans have fled the island in numbers unseen since the 1980 Mariel boat lift. U.S. president Bill Clinton announced Aug. 19 that for the first time in 28 years, Cubans seeking asylum would be turned away.

Out of bondage

A sex educator tells how S/M gave birth to safe sex. By Carol A. Queen

BY NOW WE'VE ALL been told we should "negotiate for safe sex," whether or not we've figured out how to do that. In fact, the importance of sexual negotiations skills — for safety or for heightened sexual compatibility or fulfillment — may be an enduring legacy of the HIV epidemic.

That we can develop skills of any sort around sex is still, to some, a controversial idea — like the insulted woman who complained to me that good sex should always be "natural" (whatever that is!), some people seem to think it ought to all fall in place like God's law or Grandma's cooking, sans recipe. However, the more complex or high-tech the sex, the more information and skill you need, whether the technology is a rudimentary prophylactic or a fancy rubber bondage suit from Amsterdam.

And who are the most highly-skilled negotiators in the sex world? Not the Just Say No crowd, not the Condoms Just Get in the Way of the Spontaneity folks, but the S/M practitioners. They learn from their community to decide what they'd like to do and then talk to their prospective partners about it. An important tool in safe-sex workshop leaders' kits — the Make Three Lists exercise — comes directly from the initiation process a novice S/Mer is likely to encounter.

The exercise goes like this: Make three lists.

1. List sexual things that you know you want to do. When doing the exercise to work toward a safe-sex lifestyle, include all those things you know are safe and that you enjoy.

2. List things you might do. Include everything that's situational — things you'd only do with certain partners or only under certain conditions.

3. List things you won't do. All your unsafe menu selections — as well as those things you have no erotic taste for — go here.

This exercise helps organize your desires and limits so you know clearly what they are. This helps clarify what you'll say to a prospective partner — the point is to have a good time and stick with the kinds of play on your first two lists. If you do S/M, you'll care partly about whether you and your partner have at all similar interests. So, too, the safe-sex practitioner playing the field must do more than say, "Safe sex or no sex"; she or he must be ready to articulate what kind of safe sex. This vague term covers everything from fucking with condoms to light S/M. Different people have widely varying notions about what's safe, not to mention widely varying sexual tastes. "I do safe sex" should start, not end, the conversation.

Certain other facets of S/M sexual culture make it logical that members of that community would pioneer safe-sex education. Honoring limits means that no matter what apparent extremes of abandon S/M players explore, they will usually have at their disposal a "safe word" that allows either partner to stop what's going on at once. Safety is important in the community, even beyond the question of disease prevention — lots of types of S/M play involve some risk, and players typically educate themselves to avoid or minimize it. (Most S/Mers are very toy-positive, and condoms and gloves and sheets of plastic wrap, to them, are just more gear for the toy bag.) As part of the negotiation ethic, and also because part of the eroticism of the S/M encounter is the planning of it, players are encouraged to talk very openly about sex. Finally, unlike much "vanilla" sex, S/M's eroticism is often not particularly genitally focused. Most S/Mers like to fuck, but their erotic repertoire includes many other ways of achieving physical and emotional sensation.

All of these qualities appear — sometimes completely divested of their black-leather roots — in most of today's safe-sex education programs. The point, after all, is not to persuade people to get kinky, but to extract useful elements from this particular sexual culture and to teach those principles and skills to everyone.

Safe and spicy

How on earth did we cover so much cultural terrain in the benighted 1980s that "flagellation, List 2: Things you might do.

unbroken skin" became a practice we might not only talk about publicly, but even recommend to those who want to construct a safe and spicy sex life?

Around the world it was called "the San Francisco model" of AIDS education and service provision: instead of waiting for others to intercede, members of at-risk communities mobilized to get the word out and the work done. The S.F. AIDS Foundation, Shanti, Stop AIDS Project, and California Prostitutes' Education Project are only the best-known of the San Francisco model organizations; many others educate and serve women, people of color, and other specific populations. Though infrequently acknowledged, organizations such as San Francisco Sex Information (SFSI) — one of the

Cybersex: The new abstinence

With "safe sex" as social dogma, talking about sex can be the one dangerous game we need.

By Susan Gerhard

COMPUTER SEX IS absolutely safe sex," Dr. Tedde Rinker, a facilitator of sex workshops for the Human Awareness Institute, tells me. She knows. She helps run a computer bulletin board, a sex-positive, speak-your-mind, express-yourself kind of place out in cyberspace. "You can't get any diseases from computer sex, phone sex, or mutual masturbation," she explains. She's right: The video display terminal is the most high-tech, high-fashion barrier available.

Barriers have always been there to "protect" humans from the full expression of and/or complications resulting from their sexual appetites. The barrier method, as it was practiced for centuries in the Judeo-Christian tradition, had something to do with dogma. Now the wall between thinking about sex and sharing precious bodily fluids is just a matter of VDTs, condoms, and pamphlets.

"Safe," the flyer informs, is: "dry kissing," "masturbation on healthy skin," "oral sex on a man with a condom," "urinating on unbroken skin," "touching," "massage," or "fantasy." "Dangerous," it continues, is: "vaginal intercourse without a condom," "anal intercourse without a condom," "urinating into mouth, vagina, or rectum," etc. Um, let's get busy.

"Safe sex" is a phrase we've come to accept in the shadow of the AIDS epidemic. The problem is, what's been accompanying the necessary public health measures is overly safe talk. Religions have been bumped from their position as sexual regulators by governments and institutions, who do the job with billboards, posters, and educational campaigns that put a heavy investment in language. Words are loaded weapons. And they've been exploding in the discussion about sex in the late 20th century.

The word abstinence has landed on the right. It's been used by religious figures to put sexual adventurers in a position of blame for the AIDS epidemic. The term safer sex has been used to shift the discussion from blame to pragmatism.

It's a new creed, and we'd better like it. Heretics to the idea of safer sex aren't kindly tolerated. When emphatic enthusiasm."

"Condoms are common sense, good protection, good hygiene, good contraception," she said, "but not a thing to build a religion upon.... It is not protection against disease I am leery of, but this government-endorsed drive to collectivize human sexuality. We should not reject safe sex but incorporate it rationally and not hysterically, for it is the hysteria, the fear, that renders us powerless."

Norman Mailer put a different spin on that thought in his August 1994 Esquire interview with Madonna. "The only thing you can depend on with condoms," he said, "is that they will take 20 to 50 percent off your fuck. Safe sex is part of the insanity of this country. We are always looking for one simple tool or program with which to solve a serious problem."

Maybe so. But some people see that simple tool as something other than condoms. While much of the world has divided into two camps — "condoms" and "abstinence" —

EDITORS' NOTE

It's hard to pinpoint the date when the term safe sex became an erotic buzzword. Still, 1984 was about the time when condoms became a don't-leave-home-without-them dating accessory. Ten years later, we take a look at how the HIV epidemic and safe-sex practice and rhetoric has influenced how we come together. As Mark Pritchard notes in "Is It Safe?" (page 27), "Safe sex lets us embrace with new confidence." Safe-sex educator Carol Queen tells us the little-known story of how the principles of S/M, now a more accepted sexual practice, helped shape the practices of safe sex. And Susan Gerhard reports on sex in cyberspace — the new abstinence. The package also includes a safe-sex resource guide compiled by Isadora Alman, and Bay Area sex experts reveal their favorite bedside reading.

computer bulletin boards and the Internet have introduced a snag in the system. Is it sex — cyberstyle — or is it abstinence? And, more important, does the word "safe" really apply?

Log on and get off

More than one sexually frustrated and/or curious friend of mine has logged on to get off — and found that even body fluid-free cyberspace has its own set of safety issues and contingents of thought police. Words go up in flames on any number of topics. Bestiality is big in alt.sex newsgroups right now; someone is always around to remind sheep fanciers that sex with animals is, by its very nature, nonconsensual.

Women who use their keyboards and modems as equalizers find that even though the 'net offers a chance to fight on a level playing field — where men don't get to use their body mass to back up their opinions — fights aren't necessarily fair. On BBSs (bulletin board services), breaches of etiquette take on heavy political weight when men exercise a power with words that they've been legally barred from exercising with actions in real time.

The mention of rape is enough to send a BBS up in arms. On one bulletin board, a woman posted what she thought was a joke. "I got myself into trouble with sarcasm," she told me. She was responding, albeit indirectly, to a man who'd made a homophobic comment. "I think an appropriate entertainment for X would be repeatedly raping him with my strap-on." What she got back was a lot of attitude and a difficult education in the form of E-mail replies.

However, that BBS user also explained to me that generally, as a woman in cyberspace, "you get more respect, because there are a lot fewer women on-line than men. Especially if you're a woman who doesn't conform to conventional standards of beauty, you can get a lot more attention on-line than off because you're not being judged by your physical appearances. It's a powerful position. I get a lot of chances to educate men."

Some men enjoy the education. A BBS user named Eric told me, "It's considerably more interactive than masturbation. There's a much higher level of interaction on BBSs than you would have at a party. A person would have to be really drunk to ask someone some of the questions I've been asked on-line." But they might be so intoxicated with anonymity that they don't know, for instance, where the line they could be stepping over is.

"Being in the cyberworld is like being on the freeway," Dr. Rinker told me, sticking with the popular metaphor. "People may presume things they would never presume in a different kind of social gathering. That's why we have a policy of respect and safety. We try to create a safe place to explore your fantasies." Which is a great idea.

But what do we mean, in general, when we use the word "safe"? Safe from germs? Cooties? Bad experiences? Or ourselves? "Everyone's very polite, for the most part," a friend tells me of her on-line sex experience. But is sex a topic that requires us to be polite — or frank?

Fantasy life

Lisa Palac, the former editor of Future Sex who's now working The Edge of the Bed: Cyborgasm 2, a compilation album of hot sounds in Virtual Audio, explains that sex in computerland "is about communication and imagination. You can't control people's imaginations — and why would you want to? That's the thing about fantasy, you can fantasize about anything. It doesn't mean you will do that thing.

"A lot of people who argue that all of our erotica should include descriptions of safe sex, but that ruins it for me. If you can't have unsafe sex with yourself then what's the point?"

Which is exactly the point: "Safe sex" is control, the go-ahead, "farm fresh" label that gets attached to sex the way marriage certificates once were. It's a necessary concept when applied to behavior, but it's a frightening one when it enters the deep recesses of the unconscious. The importance of the computer world is that it's the one place where experiments in danger can, well, safely occur.

But the word "safety" attached to the word "sex" is an awkward juxtaposition, at best. In a world full of religious doctrine and public-health warnings, we barely have time to address the broader topic of "sex."

As Dr. Rinker explained, "Getting the religious fundamentalists out, so that people aren't ashamed to ask questions and so people don't get misinformation, such as 'The only way to ensure that you won't get AIDS is being celibate,' is one way to solve the problem."

Latex and computers are another. But they only offer protection against diseases — and they don't always even work in that respect: As condoms can fall off, so can the "cyber" barrier. Sometimes people meet their fantasies, sometimes they get bothered by them, and sometimes those fantasies just don't work out. You might not get any diseases, but you might get burned. With the swirl of sexual propaganda these days, however, that's a risk we barely have time to consider. ■

You have reached God's voice mail

MY ASSIGNMENT, and I chose to accept it, was to find out what different religious organizations in the Bay Area had to say on the subject of safe sex.

What I found was that getting religious groups to talk about sex, even in the most detached manner, is like pulling teeth. Using the word "sex" did not endear me to receptionists of religious organizations. In general, my request for safe-sex information was met with bafflement, as if I had called a pet store to ask if they sold fur coats.

The bureaucracy I encountered was considerable, and people were often both elusive and evasive. The Episcopal Diocese of California pinballed me from voice mail to voice mail, while the Presbyterian Church offered me only the names of people who were inevitably on vacation or out of the office. By far the most 1984-esque response came from the San Francisco Archbishop's Office of the Catholic Church. When I eventually reached the person responsible for safe-sex information, he answered my questions with three questions of his own: my name, the organization I was with, and my phone number. I never got a call back.

The Jesuits of the University of San Francisco were initially hostile and defensive. The priest I first spoke with returned my questions, pointing out my ignorance about the Jesuit order and asking me if I really wanted to hear what they had to say. By the time I reached the right office, where I was told that USF does not consider safe sex a morally acceptable option to abstinence, I was so grateful for a straight answer that I forgot to be appalled.

Of all people, the Scientologists were the most enlightened organization I contacted. A representative told me that Scientology does not preach morality to its parishioners, but that "a responsible person in this day and age has to understand what sex means, and should be educated." He followed this with a quote from L. Ron Hubbard himself: "If one knows the tech of how to do something, and can do it, and uses it, he cannot be the adverse effect of it." While certainly not the most graceful aphorism I've heard, it nevertheless advocates education and knowledge.

I next turned to my list of long shots. The Gideons stated that they only distributed bibles, and that sex education was "not their field." The Salvation Army, whose religious dogma continues to remain a mystery to me, provided me only with three names of absent people. The Islamic Center was polite and responsive, though the number they gave me for their president turned out to be the residence of an amiable Irish couple.

Alas, the two organizations whose names most intrigued me were disappointments. I can only guess what the United Lodge of Theosophists, whose dogma I assume is Brahman-influenced and pantheistic, would have said about safe sex. As for "Torah on the Line" — well, it wasn't. The phone, connected as I imagine it by a golden wire stretching through the clouds to the desk of Yahweh, where the well-thumbed books of the Pentateuch lay in disarray next to a half-eaten muffin and a mug of coffee, simply rang and rang. There was no voice mail, no answering machine. And I thought to myself, "What century does He live in, anyway?"

SAFE SEX

Harnessing the energy: Safe sex is an unsung gift from the S/M community.

Coming next week

Pick up next week's issue of the Bay Guardian for Part 2 of our look at sex in the '90s. In it, you'll find articles on the anticircumcision movement. Plus, Isadora Alman profiles the San Francisco Sex Information Hotline.

first groups to hand out condoms — and the Institute for Advanced Study of Human Sexuality also played a role in the development of our homegrown and much-imitated response to the HIV epidemic. But hardly anyone routinely mentions the fact that the most influential aspect of all — what has come to be called "safe sex" — was pioneered by people who do S/M.

David Lourea and Cynthia Slater, SFSI trainers, sounded the alarm in that organization in 1981. Slater had founded the Society of Janus, one of the nation's first S/M support organizations. Other members of the S/M community, like noted photographer Mark Chester, joined them in developing ways of teaching about sex that drew from S/M. SFSI members worked with the S.F. AIDS Foundation to help set up the Foundation's hot line, and interplay between two sexually active and sophisticated communities — gay men and S/M players — coalesced into strategy for teaching about sexual health.

Slater and Lourea died of AIDS-related illnesses and didn't live to see the removal of consensual S/M from psychiatrists' official list of mental illnesses, the DSM-IV, which happened earlier this year. On the surface, this deletion has nothing to do with safe sex or AIDS, yet it's part of a remarkable fabric of change wrought in part by the epidemic, which has made it critical to talk openly about all kinds of sex. In turn this expanded communication possibilities, and we see the results in everything from the 'zine explosion to cable TV.

With the contributions Madonna and MTV have made toward the mainstreaming of S/M images via print, film, and video (often badly — please, kids, don't try any of those Body of Evidence tricks at home, at least not before you've joined Society of Janus) and with the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention now printing brochures that talk about fisting, America has started to learn about S/M sexuality — though not, ironically, that an S/M community exists to teach them these sexual skills.

Safe-sex education is, to a significant extent, an unsung gift from members of that community.

While safe sex seems to have brought S/M into public notice as one of its more exotic manifestations, the reality is more circular. A once-secretive community contributed to its own new visibility by helping create today's expanded discourse about sex. ■

Bedside reading

Writers review their favorite sex books

Dorothy Allison, author of Skin and Bastard out of Carolina: "Thongs by Alexander Trocchi. Trocchi was a beat writer who did a lot of drug books. His drug books are tedious but boy, Thongs is just a kick-ass book. It's a female masochist Jesus book that ends with a crucifixion."

Bill Brent, publisher of the sex-positive 'zine Black Sheets and the annual nationwide directory The Black Book: "I would say the Bible. It's wonderful — more sex and violence than NYPD Blue. It's got incest, onanism, and sex with extraterrestrials. But on the down side, there are no pictures."

Isadora Alman, columnist and author of Ask Isadora and Let's Talk Sex: "Anything that can be read aloud to whomever might be lying next to you that results in a smiling face. I am in great agreement with Madame de Something-or-other — that once someone has made me laugh, it's no longer a question of whether, but of when."

Mark Pritchard, coeditor of Frighten the Horses: "Juliette, by the Marquis de Sade — 1,200 pages of the most transgressive, heedless, and unsafe sex ever written, couched in a satire of 17th-century society. As pornography, nothing will ever equal it."

Lilly Burana, editor of Futuresex: "Sex Work, edited by Priscilla Alexander, is a pretty great book about the sex industry. I.S. Levine and Robert Stoller's Coming Attractions, a book of Stoller's theories on sex work, doesn't sacrifice saltiness. As a porn book, I get a lot of mileage out of Pamela Des Barres's I'm with the Band."

Carol A. Queen, writer, activist, and S/M and safe-sex educator: "My favorite sex book — is it Sexual Behavior in the Human Female by Alfred C. Kinsey, which prompted me to masturbate with a stopwatch to see whether I could beat the "average time to orgasm"? Or anything by Pat Califia — especially Macho Sluts and Melting Point — which honor the delicate complexity and hard-edged heat of radical sex even as they stay true to the body's sexual reality."

Kathy Acker, author of My Mother, Demonology, and Pussy, King of the Pirates, which will be published by Grove in 1995: "An early quartet of pornography by Alexander Trocchi — Helen and Desire, The Carnal Days of Helen Seferis, White Thighs, and Thongs. The thing that struck me on reading through the quartet is that under the guise of pornography, these books are one of the best arguments against liberalism that becomes hypocrisy. And of course, The Story of O — and that's just love."

Marcy Shelner, editor of Herotica III: "I can't confine myself to one favorite sex book because I need more than one! But my favorite porn writer is the late Marco Vassi. Why? Because he describes in minute detail the thought and feelings going on during sex. This attention to detail has not only brought me many orgasms, but also taught me a lot about sexuality and sexual literature." ■

Is it safe?

A brief history of safe sex.

By Mark Pritchard

YOU CAN'T say much about love in the second generation of the Sexual Revolution without putting the word safe in front of the word sex. The strategies attempted by people to ensure that their love-making leads to pleasure and fulfillment, rather than disease and death, are as varied as the people who use them.

To me and most of my friends, safe sex means using latex for intercourse, not sharing sex toys or sharp objects such as piercing needles, and getting tested for sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) periodically to keep ourselves aware of our health. To some, it means de-emphasizing intercourse and seeking sexual pleasure through other means, such as mutual masturbation or sado-masochistic scenes in which penetration never takes place. For many others, knowing their partners' sexual histories reassures them that they're safe.

The urge to be safe while having sex is an old one. For most of history, safety meant not getting pregnant, and anal intercourse and homosexuality were widely practiced methods of prevention. Some early Americans practiced "bundling," in which they were permitted to go to bed together if fully clothed; the object was to preserve virginity. In the days before antibiotics, sex without condoms (euphemistically known as "protection") was dangerous because every new encounter carried with it the risk of incurable syphilis and other diseases.

The danger faded with advances in medicine and contraceptive technology, along with liberalized laws permitting greater access to abortion and contraception. For a brief period in the 1960s and '70s, it was possible to have sex with almost no worry about disease or pregnancy, which were considered temporary conditions to be taken care of. People became more open and fearless about things they'd previously done in secret: All sex was "safe."

Then the early 1980s brought the herpes outbreak, just a curtain-raiser for the HIV epidemic and AIDS. With each discovery about how the disease was passed between sexual partners, millions more became consigned to fearful "high risk groups." Early on, it was thought that if you had been monogamous for two years, you were safe. Then that was changed to five years, then seven years, then ten, until it seemed almost everyone was at risk.

The shocking thing about the HIV epidemic was not that sex was suddenly dangerous, since the best sex has always posed social if not physical risk. What shocked everybody was that modern technology, which we had thought would solve every problem from acne to poverty, had failed. The other thing that really upset people was that these diseases interrupted a hell of a party. Just when it was finally safe to be a liberated woman or an out queer, a disease came out of nowhere and spoiled everything.

Now, a dozen years into the HIV epidemic, safe sex lets us embrace with renewed confidence. Local sex shops like Good Vibrations and sex clubs like Eros cater to a subculture of people who frankly like sex and spend time and money pursuing it. At regular wide-open sex parties, where condoms full of rubbers, gloves, and lube are available, men and women of every sexual orientation couple and triple with the same abandon as in the '70s.

Almost. There are two main differences: Drugs are not as prevalent, and people exchange no fluids.

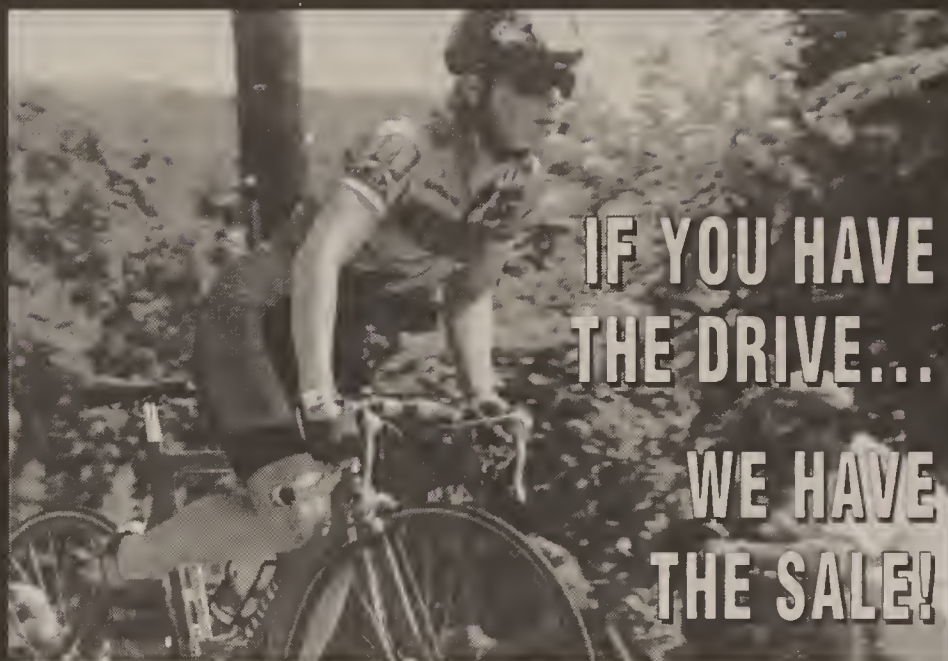

For the sexually active adult, safe sex behavior has become a combination of muted anxiety, enthusiastic consumerism, New Age negotiation techniques, and pure superstition. Almost everyone knows that condoms, properly used, will prevent the transmission of viruses, but people disagree over what "proper use" is. Do you need them for blow jobs? An article in a recent issue of the Advocate suggested you do, contradicting the prevailing wisdom for the last several years. Should devotees of cunnilingus worry? HIV transmission rates are low for this method, but that doesn't stop health workers from pushing dental dams, even though a dyke friend once told me, "Every woman has used them — once."

I draw three conclusions about safe sex today. The first is that there is a lot of sex happening, and if people didn't care passionately about their access to pleasure, they wouldn't be worried. The second is that, no matter how many steps we take, we can never be completely safe from disease, unemployment, a drive-by shooting, or the Big One. And finally, pleasure, with all of its blessings, is worth arguing over, working toward, and fighting for. ■

The Feminine Critique

Creepy places

BY JEAN TEPPERMAN

YOU'RE CROSSING the floor of a cavernous parking garage and you hear footsteps. Or the mall's rest rooms are around a corner at the end of a long, deserted hallway. Or the elevator door opens and there's a man inside, waiting to continue going up. Or you're walking the three blocks from the bus stop to your house at 10:30 p.m.

Every woman knows what I'm talking about: The continual nervous, defensive calculations we make to navigate the city. We know hundreds of strategies: Don't list your first name in the phone book. Don't walk like a victim. Carry your keys in your fist. Don't walk anywhere at night.

That anxiety isn't just a natural part of being a woman, says a Toronto group called METRAC (the Metro Action Committee on Public Violence against Women and Children). If the city environment makes us nervous, the group argues, then that environment should change.

METRAC argues that it's not just actual sexual assault, but also the constant fear of sexual assault that oppresses women. "Women don't participate fully in public and community life because of this fear," METRAC's consultant Connie Guberman reminded me when I called her last week.

I found out about METRAC from a notice in a women's publication. It said a women's group in Toronto had worked with transit officials to reduce sexual assaults in subway stations, trains, and buses. I was amazed. The list of 63 changes they're making includes: intercom buttons in the stations, redesign of stations for better visibility, closed-circuit TV surveillance, better lighting, and new rules. Now, for example, any women can ask a bus driver to make a special stop after 10 p.m., so she can get off closer to her house.

The transit program, I later learned, was only the biggest of many METRAC projects; others have made significant changes in parking garages, parks, neighborhoods, and college campuses. The group's genius is in turning the issue of women's safety around, "taking the emphasis off the victim," as Guberman said, and aiming at making the environment safe for women.

Why does METRAC focus its public-safety agenda on women? One easy answer is that women are more trapped by fear. METRAC publications cite polls showing that twice as many women as men are afraid to walk at night in their neighborhoods, for example. "When it's safe for women," Guberman said, "it's safe for everyone." And METRAC found that women's concerns about sexual assault are often ignored in "general" anticrime efforts. When the group surveyed campus security chiefs, Guberman said, "We got back all these reports about fire extinguishers and locking up the computers."

METRAC's basic tool is the "security audit": Teams of women — the women who use the subway or live in the neighborhood — survey locations with a questionnaire that asks about specific features: lighting, isolation, visibility, possible entrapment sites, etc. They write up the results, make recommendations, and negotiate with the authorities — or bring them along on the audits.

The first question on METRAC's audit guide, though, is the most important. It simply asks, "What is your gut reaction to this place?" METRAC's descriptions of problem places often start with, "Women reported feeling nervous ..." METRAC literature exhorts women to "remember that your feelings and experiences count.... You are the expert."

That's METRAC's most radical message: Women's experiences matter. It matters that we go around feeling scared. It matters that so many women give up opportunities for jobs, recreation, or education because they're afraid to go out at night.

Guberman said she'd just met with a social worker from a low-income housing development. A group of young mothers there approached METRAC and did a women's safety audit of their neighborhood. The results went beyond improved lighting and increased police presence, the social worker reported. "She said it really changed their lives. The women who did the audit feel like they've taken back their community by claiming a space that wasn't theirs before. Their self-esteem soared."

Any last comments? I asked Guberman. "We don't think the main problem is public space," she said. "Remember, the majority of attacks on women take place in the home, by people they know. This is only one piece of a movement against violence. But it's a critical piece."

For more information, contact METRAC, 158 Spadina Rd., Toronto, Ontario, M5R 2T8, Canada. (416) 392-3135.

The right to vote

It isn't everything, but where would we be without it? The ink was hardly dry on the 19th Amendment before male pundits proclaimed it would never make any difference because women would just vote however their husbands voted.

You're invited to celebrate how wrong they were, to celebrate every year as the year of the woman, and specifically to celebrate the anniversary of women winning the right to vote, at San Francisco NOW's Women's Equality Day Luncheon this Friday, Aug. 26, Gabbiano's Restaurant, 1 Ferry Plaza at the Embarcadero, S.F., 11:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m., $45 (to benefit SFNOW PAC). Ask Isadora

War of the words

BY ISADORA ALMAN

In your recent column you cited the far from anonymous classic by the English humorist A.P. Herbert titled "The Portions of the Female." It was penned in the 1930s and quoted (with the correct wording) on page 168 of the book The Mating Trade (by John Godwin, Doubleday, 1973).

With delight I read "Study in Anatomy" in a recent column. Bawdy musician and folklorist Oscar Brand put the poem to music and recorded it in 1961 on his Bawdy Songs Goes to College LP. On the album's back cover he writes: "This song must be credited to whichever school of higher education boasts of the matriculation of literary giant Christopher Sorley. I have never seen the original poem in print, but accumulated the material line by line over a period of ten years." To clarify, all the other songs on the album are attributed to a particular college, such as Dartmouth, Barnard, UCLA, etc., according to where Brand collected the song or the most verses. He does not say who Christopher Sorley is.

The recitation in your recent column delighted me no end because the poem therein is an old friend of mine. Let me tell you that I am an old geezer, therefore my veracity is unimpeachable. I first encountered this masterwork at a cocktail party in New York City in 1950. I took down a volume from the host's library titled The Unpublished Poems of Dorothy Parker, which was a vanity press printing done up by a friend of Parker's. And guess what was in it? None other. The work was attributed to Parker by its "publisher" as circa 1939-40. The volume was autographed by Ms. Parker, and my friend swore that she witnessed the signing. And here's the sex angle: Having revealed this treasure to countless women across the span of my life, I can assure you that it has been catalyst to many a fond liaison. And it still works!

What poem is this, Occasional Reader may ask? A version of it was printed in this column not too long ago. Another is to be found on pages 30-31 of Ask Isadora (Masquerade Books, 1992).

To the 31-year-old woman who has never had sex: I am your male counterpart. While not totally inexperienced, I have never had sexual intercourse. I'm going for counseling now to develop the social skills and self-image needed to overcome crippling shyness (that pertains to women and most social situations) and a horrendous lack of self-confidence. Counseling is helping, but it's a long, hard, slow, and sometimes frightening process. More than anything, know that you aren't alone. The more I talk about this with others, I find this a more common problem than you (we?) may realize. Women in some discussion groups have indicated they feel it's no disgrace and don't think most women would be turned off by my inexperience. May you be fortunate to find an understanding and caring man who doesn't view you as a mere conquest and who will make your first experience(s) positive and memorable. Even though we don't know each other, I'll make a deal with you: I won't give up if you won't.

Beyond Glad wrap

'Eros Veils' are shaped, see-through, plasticlike safer-sex barriers for oral sex on women. Easier to buy and to use and handier than dental dams, they sell for about $1 each. 553 14th St., San Francisco, CA 94103.

A California inventor needs your creative input (and wouldn't turn down an investor for product development and marketing). Jane Hunnicutt has received a U.S. patent for an Erotic Prophylactic (working title) for vaginal and anal sex that's worn by the receiving partner. Briefly (no pun intended), this is a pair of panties with a very loose crotch (now doesn't that sound sexy?) which, when pushed against, presses into the orifice in question. The advantage here is that areas outside those covered by a typical condom, male or female, are also protected from the herpes virus and other unwanted. What Hunnicutt needs is a catchy name for the thing. Write her at Box 833, Sebastopol, CA 95473.

Plug and play: Max Roman tries a hamburger and the Internet at Icon.

A byte to eat

BY STEPHANIE ROSENBAUM

AS MY UNCLE Bernie said about show biz, you gotta have a gimmick. After all, a Wonderbra by any other name is just a push-up bra, and a bowl of clams is just a bowl of clams — unless, of course, you dub them "clams in a digital broth," line your bathrooms with old computer keyboards, and install a free Internet terminal in your dining room. Sure, you're still running a restaurant, but now you can call it "a virtual ritual of entertaining food, theatrical ambiance, and the technological." Or the Icon Byte Bar and Grill, for short.

Thankfully, the foot-wide purple and black stripes wrapping around the corner of 9th and Folsom Streets have been painted over, and a discreet blue neon sign installed where the Limbo diner's big yellow letters once hung. A rusty metal sculpture perches on the bar, and various hunks of rewired, repainted, and re-created technodebris scale the walls and crawl along the back of the banquettes.

With a menu weighted towards "bits" and "bytes," Icon is set up for the drinking and grazing crowd, which may explain why our waiter asks us several times what we'd like to drink, then disappears for a long time while we fiddle with our menus and watch the endless loops of computer-generated graphics and animation flashing on the large video screens above our heads.

The bytes are really bar food, not appetizers, as we quickly realize when two heaping baskets of Cajun fries ($2) and fried calamari with two dipping sauces ($6) are delivered to our table, along with a large, shallow dish of polenta ($4.25). Never having picked up the European habit of putting mayonnaise on fried food, I ignore the aioli in favor of the hot and sour sauce, which is good on the light and crispy calamari but would be amazing on an egg roll. The polenta has a great texture — smooth and suave with a pleasant nubbliness — and the roasted garlic cloves on top are mellow and sweet. Someone in the kitchen has a heavy hand with the dairy products, however, and the result is cloyingly rich, with a strong and lingering aftertaste of pecorino cheese unrelieved by the slim wedge of lemon stashed alongside the plate.

Remember how family-style restaurants used to have games on the place mats? In a similar tradition, we wander over to the much-heralded Internet terminal while waiting for our "megabytes" (entrées to you, pathetic earthling). A recent convert to the cyberworld, I'm looking forward to cruising through some really groovy, high-tech business or, at the very least, sending some E-mail postcards. Alas, we've only begun to dip our toes into the worldwide web when the system errors start flashing, and all of the fun stuff disappears. Disconsolate, we return to our black rubber-covered table for roasted rosemary chicken ($9.50), moist and herby, served with roasted potatoes and a delicious mushroom demi-glace. In contrast, the red snapper ($9.25) is waxy and slightly less than fresh, the Vera Cruz sauce a smothering blanket of tomatoes, onions, and green peppers, its saltiness compounded by a briny stubble of capers.

The vegetable platter ($7.75) suffers from a similar hit-or-miss approach to seasoning. Strips of grilled zucchini are smoky and succulent, but the flaccid grilled eggplant cries out for garlic or soy. There's a pile of too-sweet pickled cabbage, some decent black olives, and an unlikely wad of hummus on a pale tomato. The same dipping sauces appear, along with a thick Thai-style peanut sauce. Perhaps it's the DIY-hacker aesthetic, but I'm bored.

Returning late on a Friday night, both the bar and the dinner tables are packed, and there's a cluster of curious folks around the computer. Clearly, the connections of owners Joegh Bullock, Marcia Crosby (whose Climate Theatre across the street bears a marquee directing peckish patrons here), and Ali Ghanbarian (Soma magazine) are paying off. This time, we stick to a byte — warm spinach salad, which appears just barely tepid but well-dressed in a garlicky sherry vinaigrette and studded with diced vegetables. A "system overload" of flourless chocolate cake ($4.75) is sweet and rich, with a heavy coating of chewy chocolate icing and artistic dribbles of crème anglaise and raspberry puree.

An LED display next to the door touts upcoming live-music theme nights like Digital Stew, Jazz Au Jus, and Tribal Gumbo. Get your three squares at home, but bring your Mondo 2000 buddies here. ■

Icon. At 9th and Folsom Streets, S.F. (415) 861-2983. Kitchen open Mon.-Thurs., 11 a.m.-10 p.m.; Fri.-Sat., 11 a.m.-midnight. MasterCard, Visa. Reservations accepted. Smoking in bar area only. Wheelchair accessible.

Soulful pickins': Inez with one of her world-famous cornbread muffins.

The chicken? The struggle?

BY DAN LEONE

GET THIS: All four of the complete strangers I've eaten with so far for this three-part series are people who don't do the regular job thing. There was the struggling nightclub deejay (two weeks ago), a struggling writer (last week), a struggling photographer (this week), and a struggling actor (next week, I already ate with him).

Three cheers for the freelance strugglers! And a moment of silence, please, for those who have to struggle on someone else's terms, often while wearing panty hose and/or neckties.

But before you quit your job and kill your boss (or vice versa), make sure you get on down to Inez's Coffee Shop on 3rd Street, 'cause you'll need six bucks for fried chicken.

Is it worth it?

Is what worth it? The chicken? The bucks? The struggle? Life? Freedom? (Oh how I love/hate to grapple with these philosophical questions week after week.) The chicken is not worth it, no; money never is, was, or will be; the effort, on the other hand, is always worth the effort, whereas life itself is not; and freedom is, um, a dime a dozen, or a matter of personal preference.

But where are my manners? I forgot to introduce my Comrade in Grease, Complete Stranger #3. Reader, I'd like you to meet Drippin's, so named because she showed up for lunch sweating like a banshee. (She's too poor to buy a Fast Pass, see, so she has to bike everywhere she goes.) Drippin's, this is the Reader.

Now that everyone knows each other, here's the scoop on Inez's:

Drippin's, a transplanted Southerner (hooray!) and freelance photographer of grilled cheese sandwiches (hooray! x3), had written to me about this place a long time ago, and I'd been meaning to get there ever since. She said it was the kind of place that makes you want to fall asleep after eating. I like that kind of place.

Ergo, I like Inez's.

It's a small, soulful room with maybe two, three booths and a counter. Inez herself came out of the kitchen to take our order: for me, the dark meat fried chicken plate, which comes with two vegetables and corn bread for $6.10. Drippin's got the vegetable plate (three veggies and cornbread for $3.25), although she claims to be a meat-eater — just can't afford to eat it, I guess.

The cornbread is wonderful. I also loved my two vegetables: black-eyed peas — a good-sized, juicy splattering of them — and a glop of white rice with great, gooey gravy. Sheesh, just mentioning it makes my eyelids heavy. Nap time! (Dream dream dream dream dream. Boner.)

I'm back. Other available vegetables are mashed taters, string beans, yams, butter carrots, cabbage, raisin-carrot salad, macaroni salad, or potato salad. Drippin's got three of these, but I don't remember which three, and I forgot to ask for a taste. Oh well, she probably sweated into them, anyhow.

I do remember Drippin's heartily recommended the mac and cheese, but they only have that on Wednesdays, and this was a Friday, so I don't know what to tell you, except that anyone who takes pictures of grilled cheese sandwiches must know their stuff.

Today is Saturday. I wish I would have followed her example and ordered the vegetable plate, or — better yet — I wish I would have tried the liver, or the ribs, because now I have to complain about the chicken, and I really don't feel like it. Inez struck me as such a nice person, and her restaurant is definitely my kind of place, but professional tell-the-truthery obliges me to point out that six bucks is too much to pay for anything less than half a bird, and this were only just three little pieces: a drumstick and two thighs.

And they were small. Not quite "bonsai," like so many other chickens I've complained about in this column, but small. And maybe even dry. Well, yes, a little too long in the deep fryer is all. I'm sure it won't happen again. I know it won't happen to me, because next time I go back I'm going on a Wednesday, for the mac and cheese.

Or I might go for breakfast (served until 11 a.m.), and get an egg sandwich, for example, for 99 cents. Can't complain about that. Or sausage and eggs for something like three bucks. Can't complain about that, either.

Or — who knows? — maybe she'll actually take my scrawny-ass advice and come down a couple of bucks (or go up a couple of pieces) on the fried chicken, in which case I'll happily give it another try.

There will certainly be a next time, though, because — like I said — it's my kind of place. I just hope Inez doesn't figure out who I am and conk me over the head with a skillet. At least not before I eat; afterwards, I guess, I'll be ready for a nap, anyway. ■

Crazy from the heat

BY J. H. TOMPKINS

THEY WANT US to go bowling." My son and I were in a rock club on Puerto Vallarta's main drag, and he was referring to a handful of young women he'd just met.

Bowling? It didn't sound right to me, but the Spanish/English thing had been giving me problems, so I just shrugged my shoulders and followed them out into the hot, dense PV night.

We went down an alley, over a couple of blocks, through the front door of a farmacia, and out the back into a yard covered by a thatched canopy. A fortysomething guy with long black hair, a ruffled, Victorian-looking purple shirt, and tight jeans was rocking out on an acoustic guitar. A group of 40 or 50 young people, mostly women, listened spellbound.

He was playing Deep Purple's "Smoke on the Water" (!) — singing the words in English with no trace of an accent — when we arrived, and went from there into a song that I think I recognized as "Funk 49," an old James Gang tune.

"Bowling," one of our escorts whispered.

My son and I looked at each other nervously.

"Bowling," she said again, adding the kind of emphasis that implied I should know exactly what she was talking about. "Tommy Bowling."

A song ended, the audience applauded wildly, and El Jefe ripped off a few licks that had his fans nodding their heads and clutching their hands with anticipation. He moved from tune to tune — vaguely familiar, mid-'70s rock, I couldn't quite place it — and then ... and then suddenly it came back to me: Teaser, the not very successful album by an American metal rocker named not Tommy Bowling but Tommy Bolin!

"Es este Tommy Bolin?" I said to the young woman who'd led us there.

"Rock star. Si," she said breathlessly, eyes wide as saucers. "Si." She looked about ready to melt.

I was already dizzy from heat, humidity, beer, and aftershocks of belladonna-laced medication I'd been taking to stave off the effects of drinking local water. And now this: In a backyard in Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, in 1994, we were experiencing a close encounter with long-forgotten Tommy Bolin, playing — live! — for a crowd that loved him like there was no tomorrow.

Unfuckingbelievable, as they say, especially since Tommy Bolin, wunderkind guitar player for a string of mediocre rock bands like Zephyr, Energy, the James Gang, and Deep Purple, died of a heroin overdose in a Miami hotel room in 1976!

Qué pasa aquí? Would anyone even think to impersonate Tommy Bolin? Had we wandered onto the set of a Mexican Eddie and the Cruisers? Who would turn up next: Darby Crash? Johnny Thunders? Oliver Stone? There are some questions that you just don't want to have answered.

Knocking over a couple of chairs, we bolted out the door. Bolin was midway through Deep Purple's "Hush," and I don't think anyone even noticed. We hit the street, flagged a cab, and headed back the hotel and a freezer of cervezas.

That was summer vacation in a nutshell — pretty strange, but no more so than getting back to work and finding a slew of letters and voice mail from Yellow Cab drivers past and present who couldn't believe that legendary Yellow Cab honcho Richie Weiner was not only at Woodstock the festival but was in Woodstock the movie (see "Showtime," 8/3/94).

Actually I was gratified to discover that cab driving — the people, places, and things of it — seems to have stuck with more folks than just me. I think about my five-year stretch as a Yellow road warrior all the time.

It was a love-hate affair if there ever was one — a fact of what I wasn't doing with myself as much as what I was. Like most cab drivers, I made sure that my fares knew I wasn't just a cab driver, but in fact was a writer, moonlighting to make ends meet.

"Bet you get a lot of material on the job," they'd inevitably say. Yeah, material like you wouldn't believe: some funny, some scary, lots of it really depressing.

The best stories were about drivers themselves, and you'd run into them around the Yellow Cab barn all the time. The lowest common denominator: "You wouldn't believe who I had in my cab today."

A lot of stories began this way. Their beauty, the bedrock of Yellow Cab poetry, lay in their flexibility. Cab driving stories were situational — drama for the occasion, any occasion.

My favorite, in two installments, was to-the-point, and said as much about life as any story I've heard since.

"Was up in line at the Fairmont this morning," said the driver, shaking his head with a wry smile as he waited to pay gate and gas at the end of the day. "Karl Malden's limo to the airport was late and he was out on the sidewalk. I tried to convince him to take a cab but he wouldn't go for it."

Six months later, early one morning, I heard the story again. "Had Karl Malden in my cab one morning," he told a group of bleary-eyed drivers.

"Took him to the airport. He was a great guy. $10 tip."

No tips for me, not anymore, just memories. I've got a few tips to pass along, though: a new deep soul compilation called Slow Jam, volumes one through three, Thick Descriptions' King Lear, and Diviana Ingravall's Thru Our Blood at Josie's. ■

ARTS & E

ARTS FUNDING

The big squeeze

Arts groups search for sources of financial support

A RECENT DECISION to freeze funding for San Francisco's much heralded Grants for the Arts program has local artists worried about the future of the arts in the city. Rather than relying on ever dwindling public funds, many are looking for alternatives to keep their struggling arts organizations afloat.

"We want to be able to support our artists better, to hire directors and choreographers," says Stephanie Weisman, founder and director of the Marsh, a San Francisco performance space. "There's no way we can go to the next step unless we get funding."

This is the second year in a row that GFA money has been frozen because of the city's budget crunch. The money, which comes from the city's hotel tax fund, represents the largest single allocation of funds for the arts in San Francisco. Recipients run the gamut from small groups like Artists' Television Access to medium-size outfits like the San Francisco Mime Troupe to larger groups such as the San Francisco Symphony. This year 178 organizations will split $8.5 million.

The Marsh is one of about 30 organizations whose application for funding was denied this year. Weisman says the Marsh is currently financially strapped, with more than 85 percent of its $96,000 budget coming from ticket revenues. The group was hoping for a $10,000 grant to help defray publicity costs and fund a part-time administrative staff person.

"If the vitality of this city is to continue, the vitality has to come from new things," Weisman says. "The idea that you're just going to cut off new groups and keep funding old groups — it's a setup for stagnation."

Kary Schulman, director of the GFA program, agreed. "Surely in the long run it will be very damaging not to be able to add new organizations. The arts could atrophy pretty quickly."

But Schulman remains optimistic

Pennies from hell: Arts funding in San Francisco is getting harder to find.

and doesn't expect the budget to be frozen much longer. In the meantime, she says, "it's very disappointing not to be able to add new organizations, but it's quite satisfying not to make any cuts."

Budgetary woes across the board mean that arts organizations have to start thinking creatively about how to sustain a financial base.

"You never, never, never give up," says Herb Felsenfeld, who worked on San Francisco's Cultural Affairs Task Force and now works with the Alice Arts Center in Oakland. "You look to individual donors, you look to your community, you look to the people who love you, you look to your family."

Felsenfeld says the Marsh and many other struggling arts organizations deserve public funding for the work they do. But, he adds, "the days of 'we'll sit here and the money will just come' are over."

Artists' Television Access has accepted that reality. Three years ago, the visual-arts program operated on a $22,000 budget. Now it's close to three times that, at $58,000. The growth has occurred despite ATA's receiving only $2,800 from the GFA for the past couple of years.

"There's not a lot of money out there," says Kris Atkins, director of ATA. "And about three years ago, we decided we couldn't depend on it."

Atkins says they need the money they get from the grant, but they've stopped depending on erratic funding from city, state, and federal funding sources. Close to 70 percent of their budget now comes from earned income — ticket sales to the various multimedia performances they put on each week. They also purchased a video-editing machine, which outside parties pay to use. And "if people can't pay for the facility," says Atkins, "they can volunteer their time in the office."

The funding situation in San Francisco isn't completely bleak. This year, the Cultural Equity Endowment was implemented for the first time. A recommendation of the now defunct Cultural Affairs Task Force, the endowment gives one-time funds to small and mid-size arts groups, and targets traditionally underrepresented organizations run by women, people of color, and gays and lesbians.

"The idea is to pump more money into the small sector and alternative arts scene, and particularly to create a rainbow of arts organizations," says Joan Holden, playwright for the S.F. Mime Troupe and writer of the task force's final report.

Holden says the work done by the task force is an example of artists working together to fight for more funding.

"We're faced with the problem of dividing shrinking funds between an ever growing number of groups," she says. "Arts are an easy target for public funding — how can you fund the arts when you're closing hospitals? But we need roses as well as bread."

ENTERTAINMENT

Life in the limelight: Mickey Knox (Woody Harrelson) becomes a media magnet as a mass murderer.

Stone-cold killers

FILM Brilliant editing pyrotechnics make seeing Oliver Stone's Natural Born Killers an edgy experience. By Miriam Wolf

I STILL HAVE a headache from Oliver Stone's repulsively beautiful Natural Born Killers. Not from the avalanche of images hurling from the screen — anyone who's watched a lot of MTV or Warner Bros. cartoons is used to that — nor from floating queasily in the sea of John Woo-style blood and violence that stain the film.

My headache is a direct result of the giant-size mallet Stone uses to pound home his point about the relationship between the media and violence.

Too bad: If Stone had brought a less moralistic tone to his direction, Natural Born Killers might have been a brilliant and innovative film.

It gets off to a dazzling start. Mickey and Mallory Knox (Woody Harrelson and Juliette Lewis) are at the counter in a roadside joint in the middle of nowhere. He orders pie, she plays the jukebox. Wearing tight flair jeans and halter top, she starts to dance, arousing the interest of nearby rednecks. One of them cozies up to her, and violence explodes. She beats the shit out of him; Mickey slices another to ribbons. A knife flies through a windowpane, skewering a witness in the parking lot; a bullet takes out the cook.

The film stock jumps back and forth from 35mm to Super-8, from pumped-up color to grainy black and white, while Stone cuts quickly from image to image. A scorpion smashed by a tire flashes across the screen; a dead deer briefly looks at the camera with an unseeing eye.

They leave one witness alive, with instructions to "tell them

Mickey and Mallory Knox did this."

Vapid, vicious, and passionately attracted to each other, Mickey and Mallory are a pair of mass-murderers (not serial killers) eager for the limelight. As lovers on the run, they play like the paramours in David Lynch's Wild at Heart — but while Sailor and Lula move inexorably to their destiny, Mickey and Mallory write their own script. The pair pinballs from murder to murder, killing casually — a cop picked off just to keep from being bored — and they just don't give a damn about the consequences.

Stone surrounds this central pair with a constant barrage of images plucked from popular culture. Scenes from the Third Reich are projected on a window by the couple's bed; hellfire flares from the bottom of the screen; live actors are replaced by souped-up cartoon caricatures. The style changes from music video to surveillance camera to tabloid TV news. Along the way, Stone tips his hat to film directors from Quentin Tarantino (who wrote the Natural Born Killers story) to Terrence Malik.

Stone's technique is occasionally brilliant: the queasy green lighting he uses to shoot a scene in a drugstore where Mickey and Mallory, sick from snakebite, search in vain for the antidote; the way the desert looks after the couple takes mushrooms — glitteringly sharp, rife with possibility — Mickey's face momentarily melts in the hot sun; showing Mallory's home life as a sitcom, complete with laugh track and Rodney Dangerfield as her sexually abusive father.

Natural Born Killers' use of pastiche and Stone's editing pyrotechnics push the film to epic levels of intensity. It's controlled chaos, a hallucinatory and frightening high-tech house-of-horrors at a sleazy carnival.

Still Stone

But for all of this, it's still an Oliver Stone film, a condition that brings with it a certain amount of baggage.

There are his well-documented problems with portraying women, and he doesn't change anything here (despite the nice Thelma and Louise-style butt-kicking Mallory opens the film with): Scenes of Mickey being interviewed on live television and discoursing on the nature of violence are intercut with shots of Mallory being sexually menaced by bad cop Jack Scagnetti (Tom Sizemore).

There's also Stone's famous bombast — the moralizing self-righteous view of the world he shoves down your throat.

At first the killings are exhilarating — the guys in the bar deserved to die (if some innocent victims got in the way, well that was just bad luck). And when Mickey and Mallory off her father, you want to cheer. But the murders get nastier, and the exhilaration turns to ashes in your mouth — you're slimed with complicity in our violent culture.

And what's fanning the flames? The media that make stars of brutal murderers. Mickey and Mallory's stature swells with their killing spree: teens love the killers — they're "cool." Slimy TV reporter Wayne Gale (Robert Downey Jr.) hypes the ratings he'll get when he interviews Mickey in prison, live on Superbowl Sunday. Mickey watches Scarface, a film Stone wrote — Natural Born Killers is his mea culpa — on TV.

In a pure distillation of the movie's theme, a John Woo-style standoff in a prison cell is filmed by Gale and his crew. Mickey and Scagnetti face off, guns drawn. When Mallory comes from behind to finish off Scagnetti, the camera crew doesn't make a sound, just films the event for the hungry masses.

In case you haven't got the picture by film's end, Stone throws in a montage of images from recent media spectacles — O.J., Tonya Harding, the Menendez brothers, Rodney King.

What's even more obvious than the media-bashing is Stone's — and the film's — apparent cultural generation gap. This is a wildly appealing movie for a certain segment of alternative culture: the sound track was produced by Nine Inch Nails' Trent Reznor and includes selections from L7, Diamanda Galas, Patti Smith, and a host of others. Serial killer chic is a big topic in 'zines and alternative music. The cartoon images are provided by Liquid TV's Colossal Pictures. And many under-30 folks eagerly go to the theater for anything that has Quentin Tarantino's name on it.

Stone wants to have it both ways. He appropriates the culture to make himself look hip and update his baby-boomer image. But he also wants to criticize the culture he's stealing; his heavy-handed "message" makes the film read like a cautionary tale for the youngsters. He's our dad, telling us that our obsession with violent 'zines like Answer Me! and serial-killer trading cards is inuring us to violence both imagined and real.

Maybe it's a message we need to hear. But while Natural Born Killers resembles the best two-hour music video you'll ever see, MTV has not, as Stone seems to think, made us lose our capacity for hearing more subtle tones. ■

Stone appropriates the culture to make himself look hip, but he also criticizes the culture he's stealing.

Armed love: Mickey and Mallory Knox are rapid, vicious, and passionate about each other.

BY ZENA JONES

The Adventures of Priscilla, Queen of the Desert

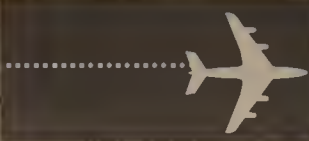

Priscilla's a passionate pink Aussie bus that breaks down en route from Sydney to Alice Springs, much to the chagrin of drag queens Terence Stamp, Hugh Weaving, and Guy Pearce, whose summer gig's at stake. What a drag! "Wait!" you gasp. "Terence Stamp of The Collector and Far from the Madding Crowd as a transsexual?" Why not? Stamp leaves his magic stamp all over his sometimes very cross dressing, with Weaving not far behind as Australia's number-one drag artist. Weaving has an ex-wife and a son and worries about the effect of his lifestyle on the boy, while usually-a-heart-breaker Guy Pearce wears a turquoise wig as if born with it. En route to Alice Springs and chased by definitely non-fans, getting drunk, taking a giant step toward bringing back the Hollywood musical — or at least parts of it — this trio sees to it that Stephan Elliott's vastly entertaining film never drags for a single second, and you can bet your best boar on it. (Bridge, S.F.; Shattuck, Berk.)

Corrina, Corrina

Whoopi Goldberg should be named twice in the film's title, because her acting's twice as good as anyone else's in director Jessie Nelson's first film. Tina Majorino's a seven-year-old whose mother's recently died. The child's so traumatized she hasn't spoken a word since, and her father, advertising jingle-writer Ray Liotta, is frantically searching for a suitable nanny for her. Enter Goldberg, who not only has a college degree and knows music, she's also positively magical in her way with Majorino, and soon has her behaving normally again. The three form a family of sorts, to Majorino's delight and despite neighborhood gossip, but the process is so slow it drags the film down. The film is so underwritten it relegates the usually excellent Liotta to the sort of person you'd be hard-pressed to pick out in a crowd of two, and, unlike Whoopi, he earns only one Corrina in the process. (Opens 8/19; Alexandria, Kabuki, S.F.; Metro Center, Colma; Century, Oakl.; Shattuck, Berk.)

Spanking the Monkey

Brilliant college freshman Jeremy Davies has won a prestigious internship in Washington and plans to spend only a few days of his summer vacation at home with his parents. Why quickly becomes clear when his womanizing, rarely home, traveling salesman father Benjamin Hendrickson greets him with a daunting list of holiday tasks, including taking complete care of his mother, Alberta Watson, who's broken her leg. Davies is broken up, too, as the family dog, given to whining outside the bathroom whenever Davies masturbates there, is added to the list, and Hendrickson tells him to forget his internship. That, coupled later with an incestuous interlude with his mother and a disastrous involvement with a teenage girl, almost sends Davies over the edge in director David O. Russell's masterful first film, a coming-of-age story that leaves the fervent hope he'll soon be monkeying around with the second, regardless of what the title means. (Lumiere, S.F.; Shattuck, Berk.) ■

On the stairs

BY KURT WOLFF

IT'S THURSDAY AFTERNOON in a warehouse on Folsom and 9th Streets. Eddie's standing camera right, about two steps behind Beverly. She moves first; five seconds later he follows. Two people walking, and six or seven grouped around a black-and-white monitor watching the "action" unfold through a video line tapped into the camera body. No dialogue. They reach the top of the stairs.

"OK, cut," says Lucy Phillips. "That was great. Now let's try it one more time. And Eddie, try not to walk in the same pattern as Beverly." The stair scene is the link between the make-out scene shot earlier in the afternoon and the bedroom scene that'll happen later in the week. For 20 seconds of screen time it takes about an hour to set up, shoot, and shut down.

As soon as Phillips announces the final "Cut," the group at the monitor splits in different directions. It looks like confusion, but everyone has somewhere to go, a task of the moment that in about a year's time — after writing and planning and gathering funds and shooting and gathering more funds and postproduction — will be part of a finished feature film.

Titled Sex Dates, this is Phillips and her husband Glen Scantlebury's second feature (their first was Steal America), a story of relationships and sex, with a little bit of mystery thrown in. At least that's what it said on the script that I saw — you never know, these things sometimes change.

Setting up the lights for the next scene: We're upstairs, in what in real life is Beverly's bedroom. For now it's a low-budget newspaper office.

"It's the sun, right?"

"Supposed to be afternoon."

"Five o'clock?"

"Script says two different times. I think it could all be the same time, but that's Lucy's call...."

I can't say that a whole lot went on while I was there, yet watching it operate was inspiring simply for how many different people were involved from various creative pockets across the city — actors and nonactors, studio technicians and independents. And experienced or not they were all excited, dedicated, and treated equally. "Filmmaking is so collaborative," says Phillips, that she and Glen couldn't help but listen to and discuss people's comments, complaints, suggestions — an encouraging example that feature filmmaking still exists on a community level.

Horizon's West

While film noir enjoys healthy retrospectives year after year, westerns rarely get their due. What gives? An overdose of Bonanza afternoons and Marlboro ads? Whatever it is, it's a stigma that hasn't yet been lifted.

That's too bad, because in their heyday, westerns attracted and nurtured some major talents — Ford and Hawks, but also Nick Ray, Sam Fuller, Sam Peckinpah, Anthony Mann, and Budd Boetticher.

Boetticher (pronounced "bet-ih-ker") may be the least well known of these names, but the seven westerns he made in the 1950s starring Randolph Scott are among the genre's finest. An aspiring bullfighter-turned-Hollywood adviser and, finally, director, Boetticher came from an action-oriented world and maintains that tension in his work. Based less on sweeping, extravagant gestures than on sharp, economical guidelines, his best films are exciting and beautiful.

Boetticher's The Tall T, which played in San Jose just last week, has weathered well, thanks to the director's attention to detail; his lead actor Randolph Scott, who hides a mysterious complexity behind his simple-man demeanor; and screenwriter Burt Kennedy's gut-level story of human dignity in a world that can shift from lighthearted to cruel in a single afternoon.

Boetticher (along with Anthony Mann) is one of the few western directors to use landscape as though it was a character to be reckoned with and worked around — the rocks and sky as visceral as the badass gunslingers and the cowardly bridegroom. For John Ford, Monument Valley was an epic backdrop widening his scope, bringing his drama out into the world. In The Tall T, Boetticher's scope is tighter. The film feels classically composed, almost like an Ozu, yet the energy level is focused, the intensity high. And the landscape — those dusty mountains, that rich blue sky — keep the story out in the open air, alive in the world. You can feel Boetticher right at eye level, sweating out the heat while busting to meet his deadline.

The Pacific Film Archive is screening four Boetticher/Scott westerns: Comanche Station and Buchanan Rides Alone on Thurs/1, and Ride Lonesome and The Tall T on Thurs/8. These are rare occasions — especially because all are new prints. Both shows start at 7 p.m., 2625 Durant, Berk. (510) 642-1412.

The Other Cinema series fires up again on Sat/3 with a program called "The Return of the Puppet People." The Shirley Clarke and Donna Cameron collaboration Shirley Clarke in Our Time will be presented on Sat/10. And Sat/24 features a program of lesbian work, including the Su Friedrich/Janet Baus documentary Lesbian Avengers Eat Fire Too — a straight-ahead picture about the group and what it's up to. There's also Monica Nolan's eye-opening video Lesbians Who Date Men; Jennifer Reeves's Monsters in the Closet, a beautifully composed film about coming out and growing up; and works by Sadie Benning, Annette Michelson, and Noel Burch. All programs at 8:30 p.m. at ATA, 992 Valencia, S.F. (415) 824-3890. ■

Nobody does it better

Danny Scheie's Shakespeare Santa Cruz leads the local bard pack. By Dennis Harvey

WE'RE LUCKY to sport so many Shakespearean festivals within driving reach, and luckier still that they've come so far from the staid "traditional" approaches that reigned not so long ago, which rotely aped an imaginary Elizabethan style.

Berkeley Shakespeare (now California Shakespeare) once ruled without question, but their move to Orinda was marked by a series of generally tepid productions. San Francisco's Shakespeare in the Park features major funding and talent, yet still seems en route to a firm artistic identity. Other nearby Shakespeare festivals — Ashland, Marin, et al. — add spice sans (as yet) many triumphant gestures.

The best-of mantle has recently passed from Berkeley to Santa Cruz. Especially since wunderkind Danny Scheie took the university-tied organization's artistic directorship. This summertime festival lays claim to several virtues: Its red-woody outdoor performance grove is both spectacular and intimate, aiding sunlit/nighttime shows alike. (The indoor Performing Arts Theater also offers opportunity for a programmatic mission that's willing to trip away from Shakespeare.) A rising rep has courted an excellent company culled from Equity, fledgling-pro, and student pools.

But the deciding factor may be Scheie, a thirtysomething queerboy as idiosyncratic in taste as he is sharp in directorial acumen. His own productions are impudent and inventive — striking even when they fall short of the full goal; those by other directors increasingly bear his provocative stamp of intent/approval. The current season's three plays are a case in point. They're respectively brilliant, amusingly daft, awry. But never merely competent or dull.

The brilliance is Scheie's own. His staging of the ever-thorny Merchant of Venice recalls the hoop-jumping of a remarkable, reprised (1988/1993) Comedy of Errors by multicasting eight able actors in myriad character parts. Like Comedy, this Merchant makes ingenious use of a rakishly "minimal" set, consisting of little more than one ice cream-type truck backed onto the Festival Glen stage. (A makeshift interior curtain is frequently torn aside, revealing a hilarious illustrative tableau.) Scheie employs cross-dressing and idiosyncratic text readings to place extreme emphasis on Shakespeare's latent homoerotic themes.

Title figure Antonio (Mark H. Dodd) is very, very fond of young-Turk pal Bassanio (Susan Marie Brecht). The merchant even risks serious indebtedness to detested Jewish moneylender Shylock (Irwin Appel) so Bassanio can bankroll courtship of much desired heiress Portia (Elizabeth Atkeson) — a suit that, in this bisexually charged interpretation, can only doom Antonio's own romantic yearnings. Ah well, love is illogical like that.

But once a Christian flunky (Appel again) runs off with Shylock's daughter Jessica (Susannah Schulman), the much abused "devil" Jew calls upon Venetian law to exact supreme revenge. Nobody likes him. But he has justice on his side — at least until a late wordplay reversal that delighted xenophobic audiences of Shakespeare's era yet horrifies us now.

The outré homo-bravado here is legit enough as interpretation. Boyish and sinewy, Brecht's Gus Van Sant-esque gender-blurred icon turns the Antonio-Bassanio-Portia equation into a classic bisexual triangle of sexual/economic exploitation, wherein mutually desired object leverages older male benefactor for social stature that will allow a more conventional hetero union. Each side's pained complicity makes the effect more moving than misogynist/heterophobic.

The text is cruel to Shylock, the target of infamous Elizabethan racism. SCS renders this "cutthroat dog" a Euro-culture slave whose relentlessly dissed profession, faith, and familial dignity provoke justifiable (if thwarted) bloodthirst. Not surprisingly, the directorial/performance focus here ditches its antic tenor only when dealing directly with either Shylock or Antonio — stupidly mortal enemies, yet equally tragic figures in Scheie's vision.

Elsewhere, up-to-the-moment pop enculturation rules: in the hysterical musical parodies (C&W, Broadway, et al.) that riddle-test Portia's numerous suitors; in interpretations like Atkeson's slackbrat clown Launcelot and Latino hipster Gratiano (Juan Hernandez); in kitsch echoes of everything from Let's Make a Deal to Fiddler on the Roof.

Yet it's not Scheie's over-the-top concepts that impress so much as his remarkably keen execution. There are questionable directorial ideas from time to time. (I tired particularly of the bitch-queen biz between flunkies Salerio and Solanio, underlining as it does Antonio's revised location in a homosexual network.) Yet nearly everything here is sharp, superbly performed, pointedly hilarious and/or troubling. This Merchant of Venice may operate on riskier turf than Scheie's purely farcical Come-dy. But it's a grand slam nonetheless.

By contrast, Mark Rucker's Merry Wives of Windsor is pure goof, a Scheie-esque concept sans Scheie's helming precision. This very silly comedy is all minor characters and ridiculous situations. It's set in the silliest of eras — the mid-'70s, as "Brick House," "Afternoon Delight," et al., reverb haplessly through various addled onstage brains. Like Portia, comely Anne Page (Susan Patterson, whose halter-topped zest belies her "pretty virginity") entertains three mostly rank suitors, welcoming only E. Knievel-jumpsuited Fenton (Hernandez).

But this courtship takes a backseat to pseudo-swinging action among suspicious couples on Mark Wendland's trailer-trash set. Aging, zaftig bad boy Falstaff (Gerald Hiken) presumes the path is open to despoil bored hausfrau Mistresses Ford (Brecht) and Page (Ursula Meyer). They are amused. Hubby jealousy-tweaking schemes result in Falstaff's embarrassment — a "fairy" visitation that here mixes Kiss makeup with "Disco Inferno."

This is the kind of high-concept staging that (like Cal Shakes's concurrent Venice, Calif., Comedy) reads funnier than it plays. A late replacement for the superb Ken Ruta (who dropped out due to a family crisis), Hiken is an instantly forgettable Falstaff. Thus the play's scant weight falls to "merry wives" Brecht and Meyer, whose Serial-cum-John Waters cackling suburban witchiness easily seizes audience focus. The ditziness here is rarely inspired, yet it amuses in an offhand way. Eternally clambering up the Glen's steep redwooded embankment in platform heels and hot pants, Scheie himself (in a rare acting role) is a caustic Mistress Quickly as crass as s/he is entertaining.

The SCSF boondoggle is an indoor Rape of Tamar, which — like last year's Damn Yankees — was apparently ill-starred throughout the creative process. Translator/director Paul Whitworth undertook the crucial role of King David when Ruta bowed out. His performance respectably seeks tragic grandeur, yet presumed late-rehearsal insanity doesn't excuse the bizarre fluctuations of tone Whitworth imposes in his offstage artistic guises.

I can't speak for the original intentions of biblically minded author Tirso de Molina (1581-1648). His play (c. 1624) is brutally concise: crown prince Amnon (Peter Jacobson), back from the horrors of war, grows enamored of half-sis Tamar (a credibly indignant Patterson). Faking sickbed, he traps, rapes, and rejects her. The resulting throne-wanna-be jostling among David's sons, and semigen-uine rage from Tamar's fully bloodied bro Absalom (a vainly pectoral David Rasner), lead toward Amnon's ultimate destruction.

This is a weird show, extravagantly costume/set-designed. Yet it's bereft of consistent perspective on what ought to be a convulsive primary-violation scenario. The largely waggish tone is congruent with Whitworth's burlesque translation ("I'd rather sleep on the rack"/"But Sir, isn't that stretching it?"). Presumably intended cathartic-ironic oomph is lost at sea here. The ending is abrupt; second-act peasant-earthly musical numbers absurd; the acting tenors (especially Jacobson's Portnoy's Complaint sthick) dissonant throughout. Whitworth seems to mock his material, a gambit that winds up insulting both biblical sources and women in general. SCS's Rape of Tamar is a plush fiasco.

One might indict Danny Scheie for running a "Shakespearean" festival too samey by half — each production camp-tined by purpose or accident, all catering to an easily excitable, pseudo-hip palette. But nobody does it better. And I'm still pretty excited. ■

The Santa Cruz Shakespeare Festival continues through Sun/4. Call (408) 459-4168 for locations, tickets, and information.

PLAYBILL

Tales of the Sea

Staging four of Eugene O'Neill's one-acts above and below deck on a gently swaying 19th-century schooner docked at the Hyde Street pier may raise theoretical problems: does the setting augment the experience of the playwright's construction, or is it irrelevant to the fragile ideas he has recorded?

Let me be the one to say that the floating production of Tales of the Sea is an engrossing evening and a fine introduction to O'Neill's early work. The first of the four plays, Moon over the Caribbees, takes place on the chilly main deck of the C.A. Thayer. It traces the events surrounding the anxiously awaited arrival of rum to the S.S. Glencairn, which has just anchored off a West Indian isle.

In the Zone examines the paranoia that reigns in the seamen's quarters when their explosives-laden ship enters the European war zone, which is crawling with enemy submarines. The Long Voyage Home, staged onboard the adjacent ferry Eureka, focuses on the ugly practice of shanghaiing in a grimy pub in the port of London.

It's a striking theatrical experience: the sea air will do you — and your imagination — good.

Aboard the C.A. Thayer, Hyde Street Pier, S.F. Through Sept. 18.

Shoot Out the Lights

It's news to me

BY DERK RICHARDSON

ONE OF THE WORST THINGS that can happen to an eight-year-old is being ditched by your friends. To paraphrase the forgettable Three Dog Night song, one is indeed the loneliest number. That's why most of the kids went along with the pack that ran away and hid while the victim — often the superintelligent bespectacled "spaz" of the neighborhood — fought back the tears.

That's not exactly what befell little Scotty Takasuka of San Jose when he got lost for two days on his way down from the top of the Sierra Buttes recently, although the Chronicle account did make cryptic mention of "father-son games" in which dad "apparently went ahead and rounded a big boulder" while Scotty "went straight ahead on the trail."

Now this High Sierra tale is not your first-rate, made-for-prime-time-mini-series drama, along the lines of a stranded suburban family using gangrenous fingers and toes as trail markers in the snow, let alone the Donner Party tale. But it captured my attention because I too was eight years old when I first hiked to the top of the Buttes, a spectacular set of rocky promontories rising to about 8,500 feet above the Lakes Basin area, off Highway 49 near Sierra City. The Chronicle story called the Buttes region "some of the Sierra's most rugged terrain," but I never thought of it that way. My family used to stay at an idyllic log-cabin resort first established in the 1920s on the west shore of tiny Packer Lake. As teens, both my sister and I worked at the Lodge, waiting tables, washing dishes, cleaning cabins, repairing row boats.

Every year I'd make the three- to four-hour climb along the switch-back trail past the twin Tamarack Lakes, along the ridge at the timberline above Young America lake, and finally to the series of steep steel ladders leading to the tiny ranger station atop the highest peak where 19th-century explorers and prospectors had carved their names into the giant granite boulders. On clear days the 360-degree view encompassed Mounts Lassen, Shasta, and Diablo. It felt like you could see past the edge of the world.

Sometimes for adventure we'd descend the rattlesnake-riddled south face of the Buttes toward Sierra City, or hazard the steep shale slope to Young America and then struggle cross-country down to Upper and Lower Sardine Lakes (where the Takasukas had camped). One summer, in a fit of adolescent meanness, three or four of us, hoarding the canteens, ran all the way down to Upper Tamarack, literally leaving chubby Buzz Woods in the dust. But nothing ever seemed dangerous, even after tragedy struck in the early '60s when a Boy Scout, separated from his troop, tried to hike down at night and fell 1,200 feet to his death.

All this is just a roundabout way of getting to the idea that, in this age of information overload, it's nearly impossible to really get inside any story unless you can make some sort of personal connection. The sheer volume, not to mention the dispiriting subject matter, of instantaneously available news makes it daunting to even try.

How are we supposed to process the numbers? One day I hear on the radio that 23 million people are refugees on this planet, 26 million are "internally displaced," meaning that of every 114 people in the world, one is in flight. The next day someone tells me that some unbelievable number of children are orphaned in Rwanda. Then the International AIDS Conference releases more figures: 14 million people worldwide are HIV-infected.

No wonder we are numb. No wonder wake-up-and-smell-the-bad-news songs (like the Kingston Trio's "Merry Minuet" and Simon and Garfunkel's "7 O'clock News/Silent Night") are nothing new in pop music. And was it really more than 25 years ago that Phil Ochs wrote "Outside a Small Circle of Friends"?

Look outside the window, there's a woman being grabbed/They've dragged her to the bushes and now she's being stabbed/Maybe we should call the cops and try to stop the pain/But Monopoly is so much fun I'd hate to blow the game/And I'm sure it wouldn't interest anybody/Outside a small circle of friends.

We are all casualties of the compassion crunch on the information superhighway. Help us — we've fallen and we can't catch up.

But on a more positive note, after countless suggestions that somebody should mount a blockbuster concert featuring the big-name musicians who went through the Berkeley public schools (e.g., Joshua Redman, David Murray, Benny Green), it's finally happening. On Sept. 24 at the Berkeley Community Theater, the Grateful Dead's Phil Lesh & Friends (wink, wink) will join Country Joe McDonald, the current Berkeley High Jazz Combo, and an All-Star Alumni band organized by Peter Apfelbaum in a benefit for the Berkeley Public Education Foundation, which aims to help bail out the district's famous but beleaguered music programs. Watch for names to be formally announced and tickets to go on sale in the next few days. ■

Alternative to what?

MUSIC Welcome to Lollapalooza '94, carnival of music, culture, and massive nervous consumption. By Ivan Kreilkamp

IF 1991 WAS THE YEAR PUNK BROKE, 1994 is the year it became a smiling Barbie doll, offering youthful consumers the illusion of endlessly shifting new costumes and personalities. Malibu Barbie, meet Lollapalooza Barbie! She has exciting outfits like the Boredoms (Japanese-noise Barbie), Nick Cave (goth Barbie), L7 (hard-rock Barbie), A Tribe Called Quest (token hip-hop Barbie), and Smashing Pumpkins (melodramatic Barbie). Is Lollapalooza Barbie fun to play with? Sure, as long as you're willing to patiently follow instructions.

Since ex-Janes Addiction leader Perry Farrell and cohorts launched the scrappy summer rock-and-roll road show in 1991, Lollapalooza has been steeped in lofty ideals and countless contradictions. Far more than just a rock concert, the festival was promoted — and hailed by the media — as a total cultural experience, a generation-defining event where music mingled with progressive politics, social consciousness, high-tech adventure, and an ethos rooted in punk's subversive spirit. "We'll kill it when it becomes too commercial," said Ted Gardner, one of Lollapalooza's cofounders, back in 1992. But since then, as "alternative rock" has exploded into the mainstream, Lollapalooza — complete this year with daily MTV coverage — has become an institution entrenched in the system its founders claim they set out to subvert.

Judged as an entertainment package, the fourth annual Lollapalooza is a good one. Featuring Smashing Pumpkins, George Clinton, the Beastie Boys, the Breeders, A Tribe Called Quest, Nick Cave, L7, and Green Day (who replace the Boredoms on the second half of the tour), plus a range of jazz, rock, hip-hop, and spoken-word performers on a smaller second stage, the festival offers a lot for $35. However, its claim to provide an experience of experimental youth culture rings hollow. There is just too much control, too much for sale, too strong an atmosphere of predictability to salvage any sense of immediacy or drama from the briskly paced, well-choreographed event.

We got stuck in traffic and arrived late at Quonset State Airport, a bleak military base outside Providence, R.I., where Lollapalooza was held on Aug. 3. After marching a good quarter-mile across the vast cement parking lot in the muggy midafternoon heat, we approached the entrance gate where we were searched by thuggish security guards and instructed to empty our water bottles. (We were told there was plenty of free water available inside, but all I could find were bottles of Evian on sale for $2.) Inside, the festival was a scene of massive nervous consumption as thousands of kids milled around the grounds, lining up in front of stands selling overpriced ethnic foods, $23 T-shirts, and hand-carved pipes, bongos, jewelry, and other pricey knickknacks. It was hard to resist the compulsion to keep moving and keep buying. At one point I found myself anxiously jockeying for position in a line to buy a $4 fruit shake. Watching all the blank faces circulate from one sales booth to the next, I noticed that few people seemed to be experiencing real delight, surprise, or excitement. There was just this dull feeling of disquieting restlessness. It felt like being at the mall.

At 25, I'm older than the mostly high school- and college-age kids who populate the Lollapalooza universe. My most cherished experiences with live music have occurred in intimate spaces shared by a couple hundred fans at most. The music my friends and I loved was largely ignored by the entertainment conglomerates. Ticketron is new to me; I'm used to the simple ritual of handing over six bucks at the door and getting a smudge of ink on the back of my hand. And while it's great that hard-edged, independent-minded bands are reaching a wide audience, there is an element of spontaneity and surprise at club shows that can't be replicated on the Lollapalooza stage. You wonder what will happen when the Boredoms meet Nick Cave, hoping the juxtapositions of sound and style will help thousands of strangers find common ground in a groove, a guitar riff, or an unexpected bit of between-song banter. But Lollapalooza felt too scripted to allow for anything so unexpected to occur. The juxtapositions and differences become nothing more than seamless stage changes, and everyone on stage and in the audience begins to look exactly the same.

Over and over, one sees kids wearing T-shirts commemorating Lollapalooza 1991, Lollapalooza 1992, Lollapalooza 1993, and of course, Lollapalooza 1994, which had happened somewhere else yesterday and will happen again somewhere else tomorrow. Watching the parade of T-shirts pass by causes a weird sense of temporal confusion, and you have to remind yourself that Lollapalooza isn't just a slogan for T-shirt nostalgia, that this experience is actually happening now.

By the time George Clinton and the P-Funk All-Stars left the stage and the Beastie Boys came on, the sun was beginning to go down, the air had cooled, and you could see the Rhode Island Sound shimmering off to one side of the stage. As the Beastie Boys launched into an animated hour-long set drawn mostly from their new album, the crowd surged toward the stage with revived energy. At one point, a body shot up from near the front of the stage high into the air. Then another body trampolineed into the air nearby. I realized that groups of people were holding blankets taut and heaving these daredevils into the sky. Like the inflatable beachballs people brought to stadium rock shows of yesteryear, these guys would bounce up and down three or four times, twisting and flipping high above the crowd. It was a dangerous thing to do, to let a bunch of strangers to throw you up as high as they could and trust that they'd catch you when you come down. But you had to do something more than just stand there and wait for the next band. This game of human beachballs was a meager substitute for whatever dreams of teenage riot or punk-rock anarchy you might have brought to Lollapalooza. But at least it looked like fun, and fun was the one thing your money couldn't seem to buy that day. ■

Lollapalooza comes to the Shoreline Amphitheater, 1 Amphitheater Parkway in Mountain View, Sat/27 and Sun/28. The event is sold out.

Straight Talk About A Wrinkled Business.

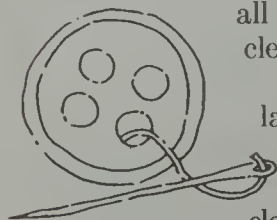

A Fresh Look at Service.

At San Francisco Cleaners service means convenience. Like being open weekends, (yes, Sunday too!) and late on weekdays so you can come in when it fits your schedule -not ours. And like doing all our work right on our own premises-not somebody else's. So you get your clothes back next day, or even same day, if you ask.

You Get Superior Quality, Not Claims.

We go to great lengths to control our quality.

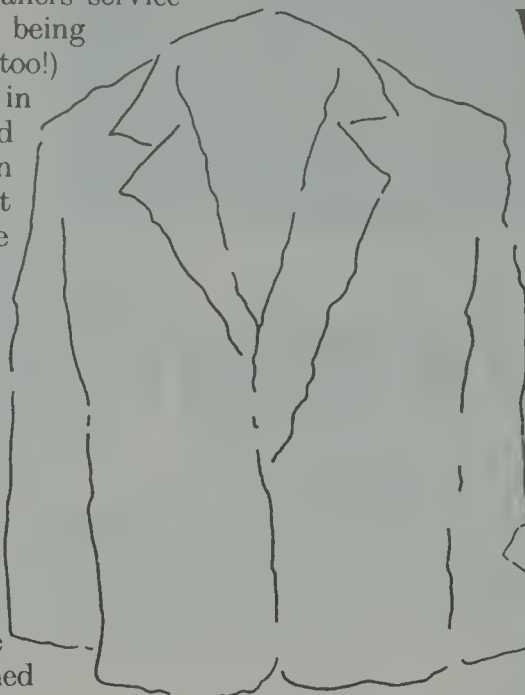

First, we inspect each garment, treat it for spots, pretreat it, and then pre-test all delicate items before cleaning.

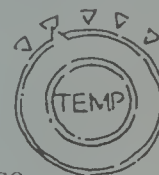

Then your clothes are laundered or dry cleaned in the best, most sophisticated machines available. You get cleaner clothes that actually last substantially longer than at other cleaners. And that's not all.

Finally, every garment is individually inspected and touched up or respotted, if necessary. If a button is missing, a new one gets put on without you ever having to ask.

We Really Care About Your Clothes.

That's why we do so many extras for you at no extra cost.

Takeshirts, for instance. We actually separate them by color, bag them in protective mesh nets, and then individually adjust water temperature and wash cycle to each load. Then we rinse them twice. Your shirts will actually last twice as long at San Francisco Cleaners.

To make you feel more comfortable, we use real corn starch and let you choose exactly how much starch you want (five levels). Even our labelling machine is unique, because it bonds

real (removable) cotton labels into the fabric, so they won't scratch your neck or mar your shirts.

Fact is, we're putting a whole new wrinkle in the cleaning business. Why not stop today? And bring your smiling face.

Rebirth of the cool: Wallace Roney during the recording of Mistérios.

Miles and more

Trumpeter Wallace Roney steps out of the long shadow cast by his idol, Miles Davis.

By Derk Richardson

WALLACE RONEY comes to praise Miles Davis, not to bury him. As risky as it may be for a young artist to be indelibly associated with a single mentor — the jazz world is littered with the skeletons of Charlie Parker and John Coltrane wanna-bes — it would be even more foolhardy to distance oneself from one's greatest inspiration. Since joining Davis onstage at the 1991 Montreux Jazz Festival, Roney has found himself inextricably linked to one of the most powerful figures in jazz history: In early 1992, shortly after Davis's death, Roney assumed trumpet duties in Gerry Mulligan's Re-Birth of the Cool recording project, a reprise of Davis's famous 1949–50 Birth of the Cool sessions; in the summer of '92 he was tapped to join Herbie Hancock, Wayne Shorter, Ron Carter, and Tony Williams — members of the legendary Davis quintet of the 1960s — for the Miles tribute tour (recorded for Qwest/Warner Bros.).

The 34-year-old trumpeter makes no bones about his debt to the master, who invited Roney to his house back in 1983 and gave him a black-and-maroon trumpet. Indeed, his recently released major label debut as a leader, Mistérios (Warner Bros.), continues to evoke comparisons with the brooding, enigmatic late genius. Coproduced by longtime Davis associate Teo Macero and featuring string, woodwind, and Latin percussion arrangements by Gil Goldstein, Mistérios harks to such late '50s orchestral Gil Evans–Miles Davis collaborations as Porgy and Bess and Sketches of Spain. The black-and-white photographs on the CD's cover even capture Roney in reflective Miles-like poses.

But for all the implicit and explicit homage, Roney, who brings his own quintet to Yoshi's this week, never lets the shadow of his idol obscure the originality of his own work. The superficial parallels to Davis dissolve in the differences of tone (Roney's is broader), melodic lines (Roney's tend to be longer and less fragmented), and articulation (Miles talked about emulating Dizzy, Roney cites Clifford Brown).

Especially after a decade of music conglomerates shamelessly and wastefully hyping "young lions," the essential question remains whether or not the musician is able to make sincere artistic statements in an original voice. The point is not how much Roney does or doesn't sound like Miles (or Kenny Dorham, Lee Morgan, or Woody Shaw, who all rank high in the Roney pantheon), but whether his relationship to history comes across as honest.

For all its pristine "dinner jazz" beauty and its fundamentally staid concept, Mistérios succeeds on several counts. Set in Goldstein's gauzy atmospheres, Roney's solos sparkle, slither, and glisten gorgeously. Played off against the tenor saxophone of his brother Antoine on three tracks and that of Ravi Coltrane on another, they combine marvelous tone with imaginative improvisations on melodic and thematic material ranging from compositions by Pat Metheny, Egberto Gismonti, Jaco Pastorius, and Astor Piazzolla to pop tunes by Lennon and McCartney ("Michelle") and Dolly Parton ("I Will Always Love You").

Throughout, Roney sounds seasoned and confident — and for good reason. Compared to such trumpet peers as Wynton Marsalis, Terence Blanchard, and Roy Hargrove, Roney served a relatively long apprenticeship as a sideman. The Philadelphia native, who attended Washington, D.C.'s Duke Ellington School for the Arts, Howard University, and the Berklee School of Music in Boston, played in Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers during the 1980s and joined the Tony Williams Quintet in 1985. With the latter he recorded five superb studio albums, as well as the band's 1993 two-CD swan song, Tokyo Live. He has been recording as a leader since 1987 on the independent Muse label, culminating in the recent Crunchin' and Munchin', two albums that featured alto saxophonist Antonio Hart, bassist Ron Carter, drummer Kenny Washington, and pianist Geri Allen.

A former classmate at Howard, Allen has become a crucial contributor to the mature and intriguing sound of Roney's latest projects. Their musical relationship, evident on Allen's brilliant 1992 album Maroons, balances his emotionally fluid lyricism with her tradition-twisting grooves and chordal angularities and could develop into one of the most exciting jazz stories of the '90s. Indeed, hearing musicians like Geri Allen and Wallace Roney finding and commingling their own voices, even while meticulously studying and honoring their role models in the African American tradition, restores one's faith that young artists can emerge as vessels of creativity rather than vassals to history. ■

The Wallace Roney Quintet featuring Geri Allen performs at 8 and 10 p.m., Wed/24 through Sun/28 at Yoshi's, 6030 Claremont, Oakl., (510) 652-9200.

Consolidated

Business of Punishment (London)

SOME OF Consolidated's best material comes not from the industrial rap trio's ultraprogressive agenda, but from the opinionated responses the group solicits from spectators during its gigs and later samples onto disc with manipulative guile. One such comment became the intro to the group's last album, Play More Music: "If you don't like fascism, don't play industrial music," shouts an incensed crowd member, "because that's what it's all about, guys."

On its fourth album, the group's first for major label London, Consolidated seems to have taken this detractor's advice to heart. As drummer Phillip Steir opined in an interview a few months before Business of Punishment's release, industrial music — along with heavy metal — "represents the last genre of male-controlled semi-racist culture." Emerging from industrial's grinding-on-a-metal-bit sequencer/sampler-ridden school, much of Business adopts the straightforward rock approach Consolidated adheres to during live gigs. The overagitated cocktail of white noise, hip-hop beats, and media bites that pumped up previous albums is unfortunately diluted here, and, ironically, many of the bare-bones, thrash-driven tracks tread dangerously close to heavy metal.

Eschewing the rapid-fire barrages of social criticism, Consolidated's tireless antiracist, antisexist, corporate-hating, gay- and lesbian-supporting, pro-vegetarian views are tempered by a more emotional, human approach this time out. Instead of dullard didactic sermons delivered with the empathy of a left-wing Orwellian view screen, Adam Sherburne's vocals range from throat-wrenching to thoughtfully calm. Gauge which is stronger, your reaction to "Today Is My Birthday," a searing first-person account of a young person living with HIV, or the preachy pro-choice sloganeering of "Butyric Acid."

As always, hypocrisy remains Consolidated's greatest luxury, but at least the group isn't as self-absorbed with its ethical contradictions. "Recuperation" indulges in one of its favorite pastimes, railing on the music industry's fickle politics and MTV's cult of personality. "Dog and Pony Show" justifies with sneering defiance Consolidated's leap from indie Nettwerk Records to a major label. The funky "No Answer for a Dancer" sets fire to the group's typically judgmental feminist beliefs when Sherburne recalls a post-performance debate with an exotic dancer who appreciates his antipornographic sentiments but insists he has no business telling her how to make a living.

Business of Punishment saves audience rebuttals for the final track, "Emancipate Yourself," which — along with requisite calls to shut up and play — includes testimony from a fan who says he didn't truly experience Jesus until hearing Consolidated for the first time. "MC 900-Ft. Jesus or Jesus Jones?" Sherburne deadpans. Sarcasm aside, however, at a time when fanatical pro-lifers go around killing abortion-clinic doctors in Jesus' name, Consolidated's dogmatism can also prove painfully true to life.

Bracket

924 Forestville St. (Caroline)

WE LIVE in a revivalist age. Psychedelia, disco, and myriad forms of heavy metal have all seen their second (in some cases, third) days in the sun. So now it's time for the rebirth of power pop, the early '80s phenomenon that took the power out of power chords and the punk out of punk rock. Glen Matlock, booted from the Sex Pistols for being too much of a wimp, was an early convert. Say no more.

On Bracket's power-poppish debut, the Sonoma County trio's grouchy, unkempt grunge has been buffed until it glistens. This is high decibel, low stress, user-friendly music. It bops. Most tracks are nebbishly appealing, and some, like "Can't Make Me" and "Skanky Love Song," achieve a melodic roar straight from the Buzzcocks school of pop chord-thrashing. Still, listening to 924 Forestville St. can be a bit like chewing chalk. The taste isn't excruciatingly awful, it's just that beneath the smooth audio rumble there's no edge, no heart — nothing to bite into.

And then there are the lyrics. What's to be done with "Stocking Stuffer," a cloying ditty painting sexual monomaniacs as harmless, lovelorn schmoe? "It's OK if I follow you when you don't want me to/Whoa, whoa.... And when you try to get away, I'll be there for you anyway/Don't try to turn your back on me.... Whoa, whoa." See you in San Quentin, fellas. Whoa, whoa. "J. Weed" attempts reggae with embarrassing results; "Warren's Song" sounds like Mudhoney on Prozac. Call me grouchy and unkempt; just get me out of Forestville.

Neva Chonin

Downset

Downset (Mercury)

DOWNSET IS MAD AS HELL and they're not going to take it anymore. Within the parameters of this L.A. band's second disc, you'll find almost as much outrage and anger as on the last Rollins Band and Rage Against the Machine albums combined. What makes this fiery amalgamation of hip-hop, punk, and grunge-metal work is that the group's sense of passion and disenchantment seem so genuine: When Rey Anthony Oropeza rants and raps against racist LAPD cops in the pithily titled "Anger!" or uncorks a sonic attack against the penal system on "About to Blast," there's little reason to believe the heavy emotions are exaggerated for the sake of style or salability.

A product of L.A.'s mean streets, Oropeza is more a messenger than a vocalist. His sociopolitical raps are long, detailed, gritty manifestos about the injustices going down in the barrio. What makes this real-life rock doubly impressive is that the group is just as likely to rail against sexism and rape as it is to denounce racism or class oppression. And as if to prove that its feminist aim is true, the all-male quintet has even inscribed this message in large letters on the inside of its CD case: "One out of every three women will be raped in her lifetime. Stop sexual violence now."

Built around a collection of heavy guitar riffs, Downset's songs tend to ebb and flow dramatically in tempo, but the intensity never flags. Even when Oropeza is rapping over a simple, taut bass line, you can practically feel the veins bulging in his neck. The big riffs don't always click in, but when you're young and pissed off, unbridled emotion and an unshakable conviction can take you a long way.

Nova Mob

Nova Mob (Restless)

SEVEN YEARS and three full albums removed from the Hüsker Dü experience, you'd think Grant Hart could survive even a brief record review without having his solo material compared to his work with former fellow Hüskers Bob Mould and Greg Norton. Not even. In fact, the second album by Hart's Minneapolis-based quartet is the most stereotypically Hüsker-sounding of all the various post-split solo projects.

Songs like "See and Feel and Know" and "Please Don't Ask" could have been tacked on at the end of Candy Apple Grey or Flip Your Wig, but they lie at the album's center here. Now more than ever, the singer-songwriter-guitarist comes off as Grant heart, investing heaping amounts of drama in moderately interesting, half-baked, mid-tempo ballads. The most representative of these is the affirmation "I Won't Be There Anymore," a heaving, sighing rejection of the chemically excessive lifestyle. The song tries to majestically rebuff the self-poisoning ways that got Hart into trouble with Hüsker Dü. Instead, it comes off sounding disingenuous, like the apology a boy might make after being sent to his room and told not to come out until he's sorry. Anyone looking to Nova Mob for timeless pop like Hüsker's classic "Sorry Somehow" or the elevating "All of My Senses" should be warned that this album just doesn't compare.

Scrapple from the Apple

BY CHEO H. COKER

'NEW YORK, just like I pictured it," harks a voice in the middle of Stevie Wonder's masterful social commentary, "Living for the City." "Skyscrapers ... and everythang." Tell you this much about the Big Apple — I'd never get any sleep as a columnist in this city. Music informs every aspect of the New York experience, whether it's the subway jazz performers shooting furious, desperate licks into the ears of indifferent audiences of sweaty pedestrians passing through the labyrinth of tunnels on their road to nowhere, or the thousands of unsigned bands, playing in any hole in the wall or empty stretch of sidewalk just in case that A&R man who feels he's discovered the next biggest thing since buttered toast comes their way. Then on top of that, there are hundreds of clubs, from SOB and The Ritz to The Blue Note, which have top-drawer acts every night of the week. To list all of the musical happenings would be impossible, so instead I'll relate a couple of the more impressive experiences.

1) The Limelight. Dig, if you will, this picture: An old, Gothic-style church, complete with high ceilings, stained glass windows, and a colossal weather-beaten facade, that's been refurbished as a dance club. Denizens here worship a different type of god: Bass. Known mostly for the eclectic crowd it attracts, the club's lineup on Tuesday, Aug. 17, wasn't all that surprising for those already in the know: techno-rave act, death-metal bands, and hip-hop groups Troubleneck Brothers and the Beatnuts. Walking inside, I was bombarded by the eeriest techno-funk I've ever experienced, a menacing, somber slow roll of a song that seemed like mood music for a Freddy movie. The crowd was composed of everybody from Puerto Rican and black uptown hard-rocks who came down to bounce to the beats, to hippiechicks and fly-girls, punks with nose- and eyebrow-rings, and a woman draped in black — from her flowing dress to her lipstick — who looked like she would quote Edgar Allen Poe at any moment. Troubleneck had a few songs that got the crowd hoppin', but the night clearly belonged to the Beatnuts. From "Reign of the Tec" to "Psycho Dwarf," the Nuts had mad rhythms and enough pure get-down fervor to keep their short set pumping. I didn't even have to lick one of the LSD stickers passing around the crowd to catch a nice buzz.

2) Dionne Ferris. On Wednesday, Aug. 18, Sony hosted an invite-only showcase for this former Arrested Development diva that was fantastic. Her singing cameo toward the end of "Tennessee" only showed a smidgen of her talent — there's a lot more where that comes from. Backed by a rockin' seven-piece band, she performed songs from her debut LP, the most impressive being "Food for Thought," the Lennon/McCartney tune "Blackbird," and two separate renditions of "I Know What You're Doing." Her last song, an earthy, backwoods, juke-joint reworking of "Doing," set the roof on fire, Ferris's bluesy vocals igniting a groove that lasted long after the sounds faded.

Perhaps the best moment of all, however, came as I stepped off the N train at 42nd Street and heard what sounded like someone playing a Miles Davis record really loud. Instead, I turned around and saw a young kid, head down, eyes closed, totally enraptured as he blew his trumpet with cool, steely tones. I dropped a dollar in his case and walked toward the sunlight, feeling good.

Demo Tape o' the Week

Stark raving Brad

'BRADLEY J. KOPP," his bio tells us, "was not born an idiot." Maybe not, but he still put the demo tape on the 'B' side, so I had to fish around a while to locate his, uh, music. But then, my idiocy has never been in question. The first track, "Don't Believe Anything until It's Officially Denied," starts with a funky art-school rap 'n' rant about conspiracies and CIA misinformation campaigns; then all hell breaks loose as Brad's yammering vocals and random percussive thrashings battle with Corey Mason's jazzy bass line and guitarist Geoff Mack's frisky reggae skanking. Eclectic? You bet. Lunatic? Perhaps. "I was there that day that you fell into your own little private hell/I saw it coming, so to me it was no surprise," yelps Brad in a rabid pandemonium called — yup — "Your Own Private Hell." The instrumental "Freddie Goes to Jamaica" features Raoul Santamaria and his lively organ (the one with keys) as they toodle around from groovy harmonics to the "Batman" theme and sampled cartoon gibberish. Madness is the mother of invention: Frank Zappa lives, and he's gone stark raving Brad. Info: (415) 661-5949.

FREE KIDS, FREE LIBRARIES

Gotta love the free library system: Information for all, a safe haven for the homeless during the day, and tons of community programs to get people excited about being in a room full of well-worn books. The library also sponsors a program of free children's activities, which take place most days of the week and run the gamut from storytellers and magicians to chess clubs. Today, Yolanda Rhodes tells stories at 3 p.m., Visitation Valley Reading Center, 48 Leland, S.F. (415) 337-4790. Chris Abbe, a magician and ventriloquist, performs at 7 p.m. at Glen Park Reading Center, 653 Cheney, S.F. (415) 337-4740. (Jodi Levin)

TENDERLOIN TROUBADOURS

Recorded in a derelict second-floor apartment/studio at 41 Turk Street, where Swell rehearsed (and guitarist/singer David Freil lived) for the past four years, the group's latest album, 41, comes alive with a languid, open-ended sound that's wonderfully evocative of the space in which it was recorded. Full of dense acoustic strumming, whisper-in-your-ear vocals, and electric guitars that hang somewhere off in the distance, the music is brooding and earnest, possessing a hazy atmospheric dynamic that leaves you feeling like the music is seeping in from the room next door. Playing its first local gig since returning from a recent European tour, Swell headlines a strong bill also featuring clever noise-pop newcomers Fuzzy and scene vets Viva Saturn. 9 p.m., Slim's 333

11th St., S.F. $7. (415) 621-3330. (Jason Fine)

STAGE BLOOD While Hollywood deserves a pat on the back for Philadelphia, it wasn't quite the genuine article. For a more intimate, closer-to-home account of the impact of AIDS, spend an evening with performance artist Diviana Ingravallo as she presents her latest work, Thru Our Blood. Ingravallo will weave together her own stories about drug use and her marriage to a person with AIDS with testimony from women and prisoners who have the disease. Through Sept. 4, 8:00 p.m., Josie's Cabaret and Juice Joint, 3583 16th St., S.F. $12. (415) 861-7933. (Rafer Guzman)

SPEED KILLS... So go die at 'Too Much Light Makes the Baby Go

Blind, 30 warp-speed plays in 60 minutes brought to you by Chicago's Neo-Futurists. The crew has developed a devoted cult in its hometown, where it has been performing for five years — with new plays every weekend (the Futurists have 1,750 in their repertoire). A lot is left to chance — audience members roll dice to determine how many new shows the group will do each night, and if the show sells out, the company orders pizza for everyone. (!) Tough to pass on this one. Through Sept. 3, Fri.-Sat., 8 and 11 p.m., Encore Theatre, 450 Geary, S.F. $3 plus the roll of a single six-sided die. (415) 995-1981. (J.H. Tompkins)

THUNDER ROAD Put the pedal to metal and head out to the Goodguys' 8th annual West Coast Rod and Custom Nationals, featuring more than 3,000 street rods, custom cars, classics, and tricked-out trucks. If all this heavy metal ain't enough, check out "Big Daddy" Ed Roth, the auto artist who created Rat Fink, the drag-racing icon back in the '60s. A karmic implosion of the highest order. 8 a.m.-5 p.m. (Fri.-Sun. until 3 p.m.), Alameda County Fairgrounds, Bernal and Pleasanton, Pleasanton. $5-$10. (510) 838-9876. (Tompkins)

JACKED UP Yukon Jack, the rugged alcohol, brings the World Arm Wrestling Championships to Justin Herman Plaza for a little "power lunch for the office bunch." See! Dot Jones, reigning woman champion wrestler, fight to hold her title. Hear! the grunts of John Brzenk, the 200-pound World Heavyweight Champion, as he crushes the arm of his opponent. Experience! beads of sweat emerging from the brow. Warning: Not for the feeble-armed. 11:30 a.m., Justin Herman Plaza, Embarcadero Center, S.F. Free. 1-800-229-4758. (Levin)

SEEING SILENT films with live musical accompaniment — the way they were meant to be seen — is a revelatory experience. Live music in the darkened theater confuses expectations and squeezes added nuance from the film. Tonight and tomorrow, the Alloy Orchestra, a Massachusetts-based trio, brings its original scores to Fritz Lang's much revived Metropolis and the lesser-known silent dinosaur flick Lost World, which plays with the short Trip to the Moon. Lost, 7 p.m.; Metropolis, 9 p.m. (separate admission). UC Theatre, 2036 University, Berk. $8. (510) 843-6267. (Miriam Wolf)

PASSION FOR JUSTICE The San Francisco chapter of the Japanese American Citizens League will host a screening of Yuri Kochiyama: Passion for Justice. The film documents the life of Yuri Kochiyama, a Harlem native, acquaintance of Malcolm X, and lifelong community activist. Her work for social change has touched thousands of American lives. Kochiyama will be a featured speaker at the event, along with Captain Bruce Yamashita, a lawyer who successfully sued the U.S. Marines for racial discrimination. Proceeds from the event will benefit Yamashita's legal defense fund. 7-9 p.m. (reception at 6 p.m.), Kabuki Theaters, 1881 Post, S.F. $20. (415) 522-1534. (Chris Even-song)

THANKS, A LOT After nearly a quarter-century of showcasing Bay Area emerging and established artists, the San Francisco Art Commission Gallery will apparently be leveled to make way for a parking lot. Exhibits have been spotty since the departure of former director Anne Meissner in 1992, but the space itself remains one of the finest in town. The doors close after Sept. 17, but there may still be time to raise a little constructive hell: art lovers are encouraged to flood City Hall with calls (415-554-6141 and 415-554-5184) and letters. Come show your support at tonight's "Seismic Farewell Party," as the gallery's 25-year visual history flashes in front of you. 8-11 p.m., S.F. Art Commission Gallery, 155 Grove, S.F. Absolutely free! (415) 554-9682. (Harry Roche)

QUEER WRITING Do you often wonder what your role is as a queer writer in the cosmos? Has some of your writing been censored because it is too homoerotic? You want to write for a community paper but are wondering if it will pay enough? If your answer to any of these questions is yes, you need to bring your voice to 'Censorship, Solidarity, and the Mainstream: Queer Writing and Queer Identity,' a panel discussion sponsored by the lesbian/gay/bi caucus of the Bay Area Writers Union. It will cover all the issues concerning PLAY BALL Dancer/choreographer Shakiri premieres Bamstormin', her tribute to the players in the legendary Negro Baseball Leagues who endured the hardships of living and playing in a Jim Crow world.

Tonight's show will open with a ceremony honoring the men, and at a postperformance reception you'll find a few veterans of the league as well as a video and memorabilia. 4 and 8 p.m., Sat.–Sun., Theater Artaud, 450 Florida, S.F. Sat. night, $25–$40; matinees and Sun. night, $12.50. (415) 621-7797. (Tompkins)

DON'T YOU WANT ME BABY Scary, isn't it, how none of us can let go of our childhood? Whole radio stations, like KRQR, keep spinning the oldies for an older generation. Twentysomethings don't have the buying power yet to merit a station playing nonstop hits from our teenage years, but there's a fledgling movement afoot that may have us groovin' to Duran Duran and Marshall Crenshaw 24/7 by the time we can afford a car with a JVC. Remember "Mickey"? How about the Go-Go's? "We're the kids in America ... whoa oh." Surrender, surrender, but don't give yourself away at New Wave City, a dance club that hits the Trocadero tonight with a special tribute to the Clash. 9 p.m.–2 a.m., Trocadero Transfer, 520 4th St., S.F. $6. GO VAN GOGH is one of those under-recognized local outfits that scribes like me love to peg with enticing multi-phenated descriptions. But when you get right down to it, what does jazz-funk-gypsy-world-dance music sound like, anyway? Laying three saxophones — soprano, alto, and tenor — and moody violin/viola passages on top of funk-poppin' bass lines and understated polyrhythmic drumming, the quintet achieves a kind of delicate, Eastern-influenced groove that's light on improvisation but still eminently listen- and danceable. Along with Tzamboni, a sextet which describes itself as "Go Van Gogh's unruly brother," the group will perform on a bill that begins with a screening of Beautiful Beach, a new film by Luke E.M. Longin. Shot in San Francisco and featuring music by Go Van Gogh, Beautiful Beach is, according to press materials, "the story of a car that everyone wants to drive but no one can own ...". Sounds dangerous. 9 p.m., Elbo Room, Valencia and 17th Streets, S.F. $3. (415) 552-7788. (Fine)

THOUGH OVERWHELMING COLOR-FAST hasn't achieved the sudden mega-success of "East Bay Scene" cronies Green Day and Counting Crows, the Antioch-based quartet hasn't had a summer to snicker at, either. With its recent album, Two Words, drawing rave reviews and holding steady on the alternative rock charts, O.C. is one of many young guitar-charged bands to find success on its own terms, helping to put the guts back in American rock and destroy the division between punk rock and the mainstream forever. At a recent Fillmore performance, the group managed to overcome its awkward stage presence with a blazing set of tugging, visceral pop-punk that even blew away the show's indie hipster headliners, Superchunk. Burying vocals in a thick wash of scrappy guitars and pounding beats, the band recalled obvious influences from Hüsker Dü to the Meat Puppets to Sister Double Happiness. But unlike countless bands who've copped mid-'80s postpunk riffs and attitude as a pose, O.C. has absorbed them in a sound that just keeps growing. 8:30 p.m., Great American Music Hall, 859 O'Farrell, S.F. $6. THE VOICE OF AN ANGEL Here's your chance to see Johnny Angel, the writer you love to love/hate, who appears with his new band, Creeps In Exile. The Creeps serve up tunes like "Harsh Motherfucker," "Baby's

Gonna Die and I Don't Care," and "Suzie's on Prozac," in case you don't know. They're assaultive and hateful, but claim to have melody on their lips and love in their carcinogenic hearts. 9:45 p.m., Thirsty Swede, 1821 Haight, S.F. $3. (415) 221-9008. (Tompkins)

A FAMILY AFFAIR Ever since Blue Velvet declared open season on it, the species familia Americana has been an easy target. But what could provide more rich material for drama, commentary, and satire than one's relatives? TV Familles — Part One collects works by young video artists that skewer, rework, or comment on the domestic unit as we know it. The program includes Jon Moritsugu's Terminal, USA, the chronicle of an unhappy Asian American family, and Andrew Garrison's Night Ride, in which a young boy finds manhood in the Appalachian mountains. 7:30 p.m., Pacific Film Archive, 2625 Durant, Berk. $7. MISSION IMPOSSIBLE The San Francisco Fair makes light of the city's unbearable parking situation with the Impossible Parking Space Race. The public can watch on in disbelief as contestants drive their automobiles from Civic Center in search of legal, on-street parking in some of the city's most traffic-congested areas — something you usually can see any day of the week, whether or not it's a contest. Traffic violations will be duly noted and will prevent drivers from winning great prizes, such as free garage parking and $500 in quarters. Contestants must submit a paragraph and $10 entry fee by Aug. 26, from which a final 20 contestants will be chosen. Those not selected will have their money refunded. 12 p.m., Civic Center at McAllister Street between Larkin and Polk, S.F. Free. (415) 703-2729. (Andrew Gordon)

The Bay Guardian is happy to consider listing your event in our 8 Days a Week and Listings sections. For your event to be included in these sections, we must receive complete written information by Tuesday one week before publication. We regret that we can't accept 8 Days listings over the phone. We welcome photographs for possible inclusion, but cannot be responsible for their return. Send information to Calendar, Bay Guardian, 520 Hampshire, S.F., CA 94110.

STREET FAIR

Oakland Chinatown StreetFest

Now in its seventh year, Oakland Chinatown celebrates its history and culture with a two-day festival that overwhelms the senses. More than 200 exhibits will line the streets during this year's Oakland Chinatown StreetFest, offering everything from artisans and games to food and crafts. Highlights this year include various cooking demonstrations and the Cultural Village, where 12 master artisans will lead patrons in free hands-on workshops — everything from painting and sculpting to paper making. And for those who want music, there's local horn player Bobby Paulino (Sat., 2:30–3:30 p.m., Popular Stage). He spices his sax-playing with bits and pieces of jazz, hip-hop, and R&B — and if the formula sounds familiar, he boasts a single, "Stay Awhile," that's making noise many of his contemporaries can only dream about. Enjoy yourself. Set-Sun, Aug. 28–29, 10 a.m.–6 p.m., Franklin Street between 7th and 11th Streets, and 8th and 9th Streets between Broadway and Webster, Oakl. Free. (510) 893-8979.

Critic's Choice: Music

Joe Higgs

LIFE of Contradiction, the title of Joe Higgs's superb 1991 Jamaica-only release, goes a long way toward describing the rocky 40-year career of one of reggae's greatest singers. Known primarily as the streetwise music guru whose Kingston yard served as a vocal training ground for Bob Marley, Peter Tosh, and many other top reggae musicians, Higgs has never managed to reach the level of recognition achieved by his former pupils. He's released only six albums in his entire career, and has often found himself embroiled in legal hassles with record labels, publishing companies, and the police. Higgs relocated to Los Angeles five years ago, where he's released two brilliant albums — Family and Blackman Know Yourself — on the Shanachie label. Though neither generated enough sales to significantly jump-start Higgs's career, they stand among the finest reggae recordings of the past decade. And although in interviews Higgs often expresses great bitterness at the lack of attention he's received, onstage he still possesses one of the warmest, most captivating spirits in all of pop music.

LABOR DAY CLEAN-UP

LIVE 105's GREEN TEAM BROOM BRIGADE and 105 homeless people are preparing themselves for another war against litter slated to take place on Friday, September 2nd from 10:00am to noon to kick off Labor Day Weekend.

Armed with gloves, goggles and oversized brooms, the LIVE 105 GREEN TEAM and 105 homeless will divide into groups of five and sweep up anything in the paths of 1st-7th streets between Market and Brannan.

LIVE 105 will pay the homeless for their efforts and provide them with free food and beverages after the clean-up.

The LIVE 105 GREEN TEAM welcomes opportunities to support the city's homeless and hopes that the LIVE 105 LABOR DAY SWEEP will generate both litter awareness and community pride.

For more information call the LIVE 105 Whatline at (415)357-WHAT. Press #6, then #86 for specific details on how to volunteer for this GREEN TEAM clean up.

Look for us next week in the Guardian and keep listening to LIVE 105!

PIETER DIRK UYS (RIGHT) AS EVITA BEZUIDENHOUT, WITH NELSON MANDELA

Pieter-Dirk Uys

'SATIRE IS 51 percent humor and 49 percent anger," 47-year-old South African humorist/writer/performer Pieter-Dirk Uys said recently. Over the years he has used the formula to examine and skewer the status quo in his native country — he's had more than three dozen plays banned — and has won an international audience in the process. Onstage he moves from character to character — Maggie Thatcher, P.W. Botha, Winnie Mandela, or perhaps his fictional South African everywoman, Evita Bezuidenhout — delivering political criticism and sociological insight into the tumultuous events that have racked South Africa. A televised segment of his latest show, One Man, One Vote, which deals with the pre- and postelection climate, was unceremoniously yanked from the airwaves near election time by the government. He's provocative, radical, and funny as hell.

OPENING

Camp Nowhere San Francisco: Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore. 415-931-9800). East Bay: Shattuck Cinemas (2230 Shattuck, Berk. 510-644-3370).

Drunken Master Jackie Chan returns with a vivacious reprisal of the role that propelled him to stardom 15 years ago: Wong Fei-hong, the martial arts master around whom the Once Upon a Time in China films (and a raft of clones) are based. Set in turn-of-the-century China, DMII's plot is incidental to its breakneck martial arts sequences, not the least of which allow the huggably mugging Chan to deploy his notoriously loopy (and deceptively deadly) Drunken Fist fighting style. Chan's strongest essay in physical prowess and pratfall pranksterism in some time, DMII — and its impressive variety of supporting players: Anita Mui, Andy Lau, and Lia Chialiang — is "must" viewing. (Chuck Stephens) San Francisco: Roxie Cinema (3117 16th St., SF. 415-863-1087.)

Natural Born Killers See review this issue. San Francisco: Empire (85 West Portal at Vicente. 415-661-2539). Metro (Union and Webster. 415-931-1685). East Bay: California (Kittredge at Shattuck, Berk. 510-848-0620). Century (8201 Oakport, Oakl. 510-562-9990). Grand Lake (3200 Grand, Oakl. 510-452-3556). Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville. 510-420-0107).

Wagon's East San Francisco: Galaxy (1285 Sutter at Van Ness. 415-474-8700). Metro Center (280 Metro Center, 200 Colma Blvd., Colma. 415-994-2503). East Bay: Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville. 510-420-0107). UA (2274 Shattuck, Berk. 510-843-1487).

ONGOING

A La Mode Like Starstruck or Strictly Ballroom, this film mixes goofy new-wave fashions, teen romance, and eccentric characters to create an off-kilter fairy tale. Orphan Fausto Barbarico rises from tailor's apprentice to the hottest fashion designer in Paris. Proving its Frenchosity, A La Mode is full of beautiful women, unlikely philosophers, and scenes of male bonding between the ingenuous orphans. Unfortunately, the film's quirkiness quickly becomes nonsensical, the charm becomes cloying, and watching Fausto enjoy one fortuitous moment after another becomes kind of boring. The title means "in fashion," but "with ice cream" is more appropriately cloying and irrelevant. (Rafer Guzman) San Francisco: Opera Plaza (Van Ness and Golden Gate. 415-771-0102). Andre The story of a girl and her seal. San Francisco: Galaxy (1285 Sutter at Van Ness. 415-474-8700). East Bay: Century (8201 Oakport, Oakl. 510-562-9990). UA (2274 Shattuck, Berk. 510-843-1487).

Angels in the Outfield Another new film based on old material (it's a remake), this story of a boy who prays for the Angels baseball team to win the pennant in the hopes of bringing about his father's return is not as saccharine as it looks. Granted, there's a lot of cute-kid value here — Christopher Lloyd is lovably daffy as head angel Al, and the film ends with everyone hugging tearfully. But it's evident from its recent films that Disney is waking up from its sparkly '50s dream: the antiquated role models, the mawkish moments, the pathetic naïveté of the old oeuvre are being replaced by political correctness. The film's real problems are its dependence on formula, a mediocre sense of humor, and the inclusion of about 30 different subplots, which make it seem like a throwaway TV movie. (Rafer Guzman) East Bay: Orinda (4 Orinda Theater Square, Orinda. 510-254-9060). Barcelona An extremely funny essay in cultural confrontation and the manly art of self-delusion, Whit Stillman's Barcelona may be the most deliciously ironic comedy of the year. Two American cousins — goody-goody Ted (Taylor Nichols), a buttoned-down sales rep, and engagingly boorish Fred (Chris Eigeman), "advance man" for the Navy's Sixth Fleet — roam through post-Franco Barcelona, dallying with beautiful women and confirming everyone's fears about ugly Americanism. Sophisticated, literate comedy for those who can distinguish between "jerks" and jerks. (Chuck Stephens) San Francisco: Clay (2261 Fillmore at Clay. 415-346-1123). East Bay: Act (2128 Center at Shattuck, Berk. 510-548-7200).

Blankman Damon Wayans stars as a broke superhero who uses his inventor's skills to create crime-fighting tools from household objects. San Francisco: Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore. 415-931-9800). Northpoint (Powell at Bay. 415-989-6060). East Bay: Century (8201 Oakport, Oakl. 510-562-9990). Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville. 510-420-0107).

Ciao, Professore! Written and directed by Lina Wertmüller, Ciao, Profes-

sore! is about Marco Sperelli (Paolo Virlaggio), a third-grade teacher who is accidentally transferred to a school in southern Italy. On his first day of work he discovers that most of his students don't attend classes but are instead employed. After persuading them to attend his class, Sperelli learns that their apathy toward education and tough attitudes are not just customs, but result from their attempts to survive a poor, Mafia-run town. While you might find the film's cinematography a bit sloppy, you'll be trapped in the fresh script and the textured Italian backdrop that makes Ciao Professore! a pleasure to watch. (Marcus McGraw) San Francisco: Opera Plaza (Van Ness and Golden Gate. 415-771-0102). East Bay: Albany (1115 Solano, Albany. 510-524-5656).

Phillip Noyce, and Tom Clancy trio, but it still feels like the first time. Ford plays Jack Ryan, a principled and inexperienced deputy CIA director who becomes caught in a web between a Colombian drug cartel and his own traitorous government. Why audiences still, after all this time, get a thrill from watching Ford leap, shoot, and smirk his way to victory will perhaps always remain a mystery, but if it ain't broke... (Ann Givens) San Francisco: Empire (85 West Portal at Vicente. 415-661-2539). Presidio (Chestnut near Scott. 415-922-1318). East Bay: Century (8201 Oakport, Oakl. 510-562-9990). Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville. 510-420-0107). Piedmont (4186 Piedmont at 41st St., Oakl. 510-654-2727). Shattuck Cinemas (2230 Shattuck, Berk. 510-644-3370).S

The Client If you want to see a better movie, why not just read John Grisham's book? The Client is the story of a lawyer (Susan Sarandon) trying to protect her callous, chain-smoking 11-year-old client from the New Orleans Mafia and an aspiring gubernatorial candidate (Tommy Lee Jones) — all of whom want to know what a Mafia lawyer told the boy before killing himself. The veteran actors give a believable performance, but the piercing accents of a contrived southern culture and an abundance of improbable circumstances should expedite the time it takes to reach the rental shelves. (Marcus McGraw) San Francisco: Cinema 21 (2141 Chestnut. 415-921-6720). Stonestown (19th Avenue and Winston. 221-8182). East Bay: California (Kittredge at Shattuck, Berk. 510-848-0620). Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville. 510-420-0107). Grand Lake (3200 Grand, Oakl. 510-452-3556).

Color of Night Shaky shrink Bruce Willis takes on a therapy group after one of them kills his best friend, while sex-doll Jane March shows her boobies to spice up this psychological, erotic thriller. The grade-school psychology in this film consists of kleptomania, nymphomania, and equating the color red with emotions; the erotica feels more like amateur porn; and the thrills hinge on one car chase and the inevitable whodunit climax. The veteran supporting actors do their best with the clunky dialogue, and March has her moments, but it's a very funny Ruben Blades, as a razor-tongued L.A. detective, who keeps you from feeling totally cheated out of $7. (Rafer Guzman) San Francisco: Royal (1529 Polk at California. 415-474-0353). Metro Center (280 Metro Center, 200 Colma Blvd., Colma. 415-994-2503). East Bay: California (Kittredge at Shattuck, Berk. 510-848-0620). Century (8201 Oakport, Oakl. 510-562-9990). Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville. 510-420-0107). Piedmont (4186 Piedmont at 41st St., Oakl. 510-654-2727).

Corrina, Corrina Writer-director-producer Jessie Norman's modest film about a widower, his seven-year-old daughter, and the nanny that changes their lives is well acted, engaging, and contains almost none of the clichés that one expects in this genre. The film's real strength is Whoopi Goldberg, who is making a career playing romantic leading ladies that defy Hollywood standards: black, rather plain, and considerably older. The earthiness and inner strength of Whoopi's Corrina are visible in every scene, making it perfectly believable that attractive, young, white ad exec Ray Liotta would, in 1964, fall in love with her. The fact that Corrina, Corrina is loosely based on Norman's own childhood gives the film added authenticity. (Rafer Guzman) San Francisco: Alexandria (5400 Geary at 18th Ave. 415-752-5100). Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore. 415-931-9800). Metro Center (280 Metro Center, 200 Colma Blvd., Colma. 415-994-2503). East Bay: Century (8201 Oakport, Oakl. 510-562-9990). Shattuck Cinemas (2230 Shattuck, Berk. 510-644-3370).

Eat Drink Man Woman The most interesting aspect of Eat Drink Man Woman is its depiction of Taipei as a modern metropolis in which open relationships, illegitimate pregnancies, and powerful businesswomen coexist with the exotic foods and ancient religion of Old China. The story concerns three very different daughters and their widower father, a master chef, whose roller-coaster lives revolve around their Sunday dinner. The film is whimsical rather than earthy, sweet rather than rich, but always entertaining. Writer-director Ang Lee (The Wedding Banquet) has a knack for creating sticky situations, and the cast is terrific, especially Sihung Lung as the reluctant but loving father. (Rafer Guzman) San Francisco: Gateway (Jackson at Battery. 415-421-3353). East Bay: Albany (1115 Solano, Albany. 510-524-5656).

Forrest Gump This is a movie that feels awfully important. Maybe that's because it places its main character in the center of so many of the important events of the last 40 years. Forrest appears with three presidents, teaches Elvis the moves, goes to Vietnam, speaks at an antiwar rally, and brings love and serenity into the lives of people he meets. Forrest has only one problem — his IQ is below 80. This makes him a figure of almost perfect innocence, a state of grace it seems American audiences are desperate to attain. Tom Hanks turns in a gorgeous performance; Gary Sinise makes us believe his character's anger when Forrest changes his destiny. Director Robert Zemeckis gives the movie the soft edges of a well-loved fable. (Miriam Wolf) San Francisco: Empire (85 West Portal at Vicente. 415-661-2539). Regency I (1320 Van Ness at Sutter. 415-885-6773). Regency II (1268 Sutter at Van Ness. 415-776-8054). East Bay: Century (8201 Oakport, Oakl. 510-562-9990). Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville. 510-420-0107). Piedmont (4186 Piedmont at 41st St., Oakl. 510-654-2727). UA (2274 Shattuck, Berk. 510-843-1487).

Four Weddings and a Funeral Hugh Grant and Andie MacDowell painfully avoid question-popping for most of this windy but wry comedy, while the weddings of friends and acquaintances continue apace. There is a predictably strange attraction, the plot a predictably repetitive one. But the bleak British humor that punctuates each wedding/funeral episode provides enough comic relief to make this film survivable. (Susan Gerhard) San Francisco: Alexandria (5400 Geary at 18th Ave. 415-752-5100). Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore. 415-931-9800).

Go Fish Rose Troche's Chicago feature tells the tale of a "carefree single lesbian looking for love" in the twentysomething dyke scene of bohemian Wicker Park. Much more than just a lesbian Singles, Go Fish mixes in vignettes from the poignant to the political (as well as running commentary from a Greek chorus of talking heads) without losing sight of the charmingly realistic romantic narrative. (Stephanie Rosenbaum) San Francisco: Lumiere (1572 California at Polk. 415-885-3200).

Jurassic Park San Francisco: Alexandria (5400 Geary at 18th Ave. 415-752-5100). East Bay: Oaks (1875 Solano, Berk. 510-526-1836).

In the Army Now The fun of Bill Murray's Stripes was in watching a group of underdogs manage to join the system without losing their screwball integrity. What's disturbing about Pauly Shore's In the Army Now is that it takes him no time at all to go from long-haired hipster to snappy-salute private, confirming your worst fear: the people that comprise today's subculture are jarheads in cool clothing. While Shore is not without a certain charisma, he comes across not as a lovable zany but as a shallow boor whose only desire is to party. In addition, the anti-Arab jokes, frat-boy attitude towards women and sex and light attitude towards war make it hard to enjoy the few laughs the film actually earns. (Rafer Guzman) San Francisco: Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore. 415-931-9800). Metro Center (280 Metro Center, 200 Colma Blvd., Colma. 415-994-2503).

It Could Happen to You And don't you wish! Nice-guy cop Nicolas Cage meets good-hearted waitress Bridget Fonda, whose ex-husband has just buffeted her into bankruptcy, and gives her half his $4 million lottery winnings, in this never-maudlin delight of a movie in which Cage excels. (Zena Jones) San Francisco: Alexandria (5400 Geary at 18th Ave. 415-752-5100). Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore. 415-931-9800). Metro Center (280 Metro Center, 200 Colma Blvd., Colma. 415-994-2503). East Bay: Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville. 510-420-0107). Shattuck Cinemas (2230 Shattuck, Berk. 510-644-3370). Like Water for Chocolate San Francisco: Four Star (2200 Clement. 415-666-3488).

The Lion King This magnificent-look-at animated film has kingly lion Mustafa being plotted against by evil brother Scar (Jeremy Irons gives the latter's voice a lion's share of evil), as Mustafa's son is forced into exile after his father's death, but years later he returns for revenge aided by an absolutely fascinating cast of characters. (Zena Jones) San Francisco: Alhambra (Polk and Green, 415-775-2137). East Bay: Shattuck Cinemas (2230 Shattuck, Berk. 510-644-3370).

Little Rascals San Francisco: Alexandria (5400 Geary at 18th Ave. 415-752-5100). Kabuki 8 (Post at Fillmore, 415-931-9800). East Bay: Oaks (1875 Solano, Berk. 510-526-1836).

The Mask Computer animators take the already elastic face and body of newly minted box office kingpin Jim Carrey and stretch it like a piece of bubble gum in the FX comedy The Mask. Carrey's a meek bank employee who finds a mask that endows him with both superpowers and a very mischievous personality, which he uses to rob his employers and seduce the slinky chanteuse of his dreams. Filmed with bright, poppy colors and camera angles that shout "comic book," The Mask, with its literally cartoon violence, makes for a very cool hot-summer-afternoon diversion. (Miriam Wolf) San Francisco: Galaxy (1285 Sutter at Van Ness, 415-474-8700). Metro Center (280 Metro Center, 200 Colma Blvd., Colma, 415-994-2503). East Bay: Century (8201 Oakport, Oakl. 510-562-9990). Emery Bay (6330 Christie, Emeryville, 510-420-0107). Grand Lake (3200 Grand, Oakl. 510-452-3556). Orinda (4 Orinda Theater Square, Orinda, 510-254-9060). UA (2274 Shattuck, Berk. 510-843-1487).

Mi Vida Loca Trigger fingers have a direct line to heart strings in Allison Anders double-barreled weepy. She cruises through Echo Park's female gang in five discrete vignettes, building arguments for female empowerment and against guns. More importantly, she builds a solid narrative that makes the working class lives of Mexican American girls more tender and melodramatic than fashionably hard core. (Susan Gerhard) San Francisco: Lumiere (1572 California at Polk, 415-885-3200). East Bay: Shattuck Cinemas (2230 Shattuck, Berk. 510-644-3370).

My Life's In Tumoround A spastic cab-driver named Splick and his bartender roommate, Jason (who is trailed wherever he goes by an entourage of 14-year-old models), decide to abandon their badly reviewed and barely attended off-off-off Broadway theater career for filmmaking. There's only one problem—they try to "take some meetings" without first coming up with a script, stars, or even an idea for their movie. Eric Shaffer and Donal Lardner Ward (who together wrote, directed, produced, and star) whip these elements into a hilarious comment on coming of age, the movie business, relationships, and New York. Studded with cameos by Phoebe Cates, Martha Plimpton, and John Sayles, this film reads like Wayne's World meets The Player. (Miriam Wolf) East Bay: Oaks (1875 Solano, Berk. 510-526-1836).

Priscilla, Queen of the Desert A cut above the usual camp-o-rama, if only because it dares to take a few swipes at the shallowness of the drag lifestyle, Priscilla, Queen of the Desert is the tale of three show "girls" on a pilgrimage across Australia. Good acting, especially from Terence Stamp (I) as the haughty and vulnerable transsexual Bernadette, keeps the film afloat through uninspiring musical numbers and many uneven moments. The film does well in its serious moments (one scene involving a gay-basher is quite powerful), but the sloppy direction, ragged script, and several lapses in taste make Priscilla hard to recommend. (Rafer Guzman) San Francisco: Bridge (3010 Geary at Blake, 415-751-3212). East Bay: Act (2128 Center at Shattuck, Berk. 510-548-7200).

Red Rock West A tough, gritty B movie with a minimum of pretensions, Red Rock West (by relative newcomers Rick and John Dahl) pleases good-timing crowds and note-scribbling film buffs alike. Nicolas Cage hands in yet another winning performance as a gum-bead-ed galoot who wanders into a small-town sheriff's plot to murder his wife. Lara Flynn Boyle fans the flames while Dennis Hopper keeps his ham in a can. Part Jim Thompson plains-state noir, part deadpan send-up of Joel and Ethan Coen's Blood Simple, Red Rock West is a low-budget gem. (Chuck Stephens) San Francisco: Opera Plaza (Van Ness and Golden Gate, 415-771-0102). East Bay: Shattuck Cinemas (2230 Shattuck, Berk. 510-644-3370).

Sex, Drugs, and Democracy A misty-eyed travelogue about Holland's (comparatively) enlightened attitudes re: marijuana, prostitution, and good old-fashioned liberalism, Jonathon Blank's film is entertaining for a while. If you support or patronize any of the above, it'll have you rushing off to your travel agent. But its relentless rosinness and refusal to question any of its smiley-faced official premises soon begins to smack of whitewash. Who financed this thing, Holland's Department of Tourism? (Chuck Stephens) San Francisco: Opera Plaza (Van Ness and Golden Gate, 415-771-0102).

The Shadow Of a film that's often more bizarre than Lamont Cranston's transformation into the Shadow (Alec Baldwin), it must be said that the latter's by far the more successful. The movie has tremendous style but is often confusing in terms of what's going on, and because that's a lot, it's a major weakness. Visually, however, it's sensational, and much of this is entertaining, but only if you've more than a shadow of an idea of what Russell Mulcahy's movie's all about. (Zena Jones) East Bay: Oaks (1875 Solano, Berk. 510-526-1836).

Spanking the Monkey Raymond Aibelli (Jeremy Davies) is a fast-track college sophomore paying an emergency visit home. Arriving in his upstate NY burg, callous traveling salesman dad Tom (Benjamin Hendrickson) decrees that an eagerly-awaited summertime D.C. internship will have to wait: Mom Susan (Alberta Watson) has broken her leg in a drunken fall and needs constant care. David O. Russell's debut feature reads like an Oedipal frustrated-teen comedy in which everything awful happens to the hapless hero — until, natch, it all works out. (Dennis Harvey) San Francisco: Lumiere (1572 California at Polk, 415-885-3200). East Bay: Shattuck Cinemas (2230 Shattuck, Berk. 510-644-3370).

Speed It's said that great action films depend only on an effective vehicle for the action. If this is true, then Speed, with a bomb-loaded L.A. bus as conduit, is the end-all of action films. Exceptionally manipulative editing and Nintendo-style pacing make its nonstop flow of trauma harrowing. The film's scope is opened up by director Jan De Bont's use of everyday irritants as ancillary tension sources: Government bureaucracy, miles-ahead technology, and uncooperative strangers all work to goose the story line. What's more, Keanu Reeves, omniscient and pithy as the cop hero, has just enough presence to be a compelling action star. (Donnell Alexander) San Francisco: Alexandria (5400 Geary at 18th Ave. 415-752-5100). Metro Center (280 Metro Center, 200 Colma Blvd., Colma, 415-994-2503). East Bay: California (Kittredge at Shattuck, Berk. 510-848-0620).

Stand Up, Don't Grovel Neighbors. When mild-mannered journalist Gao Wen moves into his new apartment, he finds himself stuck between a rigid Communist Party couple and their troublesome teen daughter on one side, and a bullheaded entrepreneur (he breeds exotic fish) on the other. Huang Jianxin's follow-up to The Black Cannon Incident is a freewheeling satire about China's political growing pains, filled with fast-paced ensemble work and mildly panicked politics. (Chuck Stephens) San Francisco: Four Star (2200 Clement, 415-666-3488).

Totally F*ed Up Gregg Araki's new feature, Totally Fed Up, begins with a tag — Generation X — but builds a layered story of teen despair that exceeds the limitations of its label. The form those stories take is the filmic equivalent of a homozine: mixed media and clear messages, bad attitude and good gossip. Between unsympathetic parents, untrustworthy friends, unstable finances, and an avalanche of sound bites, his characters have plenty to work with. Araki takes responsibility to flesh out the problems of gay teens — by shaping the stories rather than just lifting them. (Susan Gerhard) San Francisco: Castro The-

True Lies A $120 million reinforcement of American movie-making might, and an all-out assault on a variety of racial and sexual threats to the American Family Way, True Lies is James Bond rewritten for the post-George Bush era. Schwarzenegger's Harry Tasker is a double agent: Days in a surveillance van with third-Belushi T n Arnold, nights at home with mous amie Lee Curtis. Nasty Arabs, a ser s of "little dick" jokes, and an eye-w ening, p.c.-puncturing undercover str tease session render True Lies the most outrageous endorsement of President Girly-man's weak-kneed, party-waffling inclusivity yet issued by the image factory. UA (2274 Shattuck, Berk. 510-843-1487).

Widows' Peak An enchanting movie set in 1920s Ireland, wherein wealthy widow/gossip par excellence Joan Plowright lives with others of her ilk in a cluster of houses called Widows' Peak. Glamorous war widow Natasha Richardson arrives and Plowright's protégé Mia Farrow hates her on sight, setting off a disappearance and accusations of murder. John Irving's movie sags a little in the middle, but Richardson's a delight, and Plowright projects a widow's pique to perfection. (Zena Jones) San Francisco: Vogue (Sacramento and Presidio. 221-8183).

Ud. le está demandando) MARGARET P. CLAYTON, JANET FREDERIKSEN, RICHARD D. RICHARDSON, ANGELA F. RICHARDSON and RAYMOND RICHARDSON

You have 30 CALENDAR DAYS after this summons is served on you to file a typewritten response at this court. A letter or phone call will not protect you; your typewritten response must be in proper legal form if you want the court to hear your case. If you do not file your response on time, you may lose the case, and your wages, money and property may be taken without further warning from the court. There are other legal requirements. You may want to call an attorney right away. If you do not know an attorney, you may call an attorney referral service or a legal aid office (listed in the phone book). Después de que le entreguen esta citación judicial usted tiene un plazo de 30 DIAS CALENDARIOS para presentar una respuesta escrita a máquina en esta corte. Una carta o una llamada telefónica no le ofrecerá protección; su respuesta escrita a máquina tiene que cumplir con las formalidades legales apropiadas si usted quiere que la corte escuche su caso. Si usted no presenta su respuesta a tiempo, puede perder el caso, y le pueden quitar su salario, su dinero y otras cosas de su propiedad sin aviso adicional por parte de la corte. Existen otros requisitos legales. Puede que usted quiera llamar a un abogado inmediatamente. Si no conoce a un abogado, puede llamar a un servicio de referencia de abogados o a una oficina de ayuda legal (vea el directorio telefónico).

Astrobay Aug. 25 - 31, 1994

BY CHARON DUNN-ROFF

ARIES

(March 21 - April 19)
Venus is being a bitch right now, and some of you Rams may be undergoing the agony of heartbreak. Brokenheartedness is a truly horrible thing — not only do you feel wretched, but everyone is avoiding you because of your wretched disposition. If you're bummed, try going out to play with your friends, and if you know anyone currently afflicted with the blues, cheer them up with your favorite toys.

TAURUS

(April 20 - May 20)
Taurans are the security guards of the zodiac. If there's any security to be found in this bizarre world, Bulls will find it and proceed to guard it with their lives. However, consider that without occasional craziness to guard against, security guards wouldn't be very secure in their jobs. Embrace chaos this week.

GEMINI

(May 21 - June 20)
Recover a recoverer this week. Do you know anyone addicted to addiction, or perhaps enslaved to avoidance? Point out to the general public that those who spend more of their time doing usually tend to be happier than those who devote hours to not doing.

CANCER

(June 21 - July 22)
Are you still whining? Here I am, risking the dreaded carpal tunnel syndrome to type out a paragraph just for you and you still can't be made happy? Gotta be this Mercury-Mars thing — you've got all the energy in the world, but life is force-feeding purity into your motives. If you can't do anything nice this week, you can't do anything at all.

LEO

(July 23 - Aug. 22)
Venus is in Libra, and if that isn't a perfect excuse to go shopping, what more do you need? Go out and splurge. You'll be more likely to please Venus if you shop in one of the cool stores that she favors, those havens of unique style and personal creativity. If she catches you schlepping through the Mega-Mart wearing sweats and contemplating purchase of 500 pounds of generic kitty litter, she's likely to place a curse on your entertainment dollar for a few weeks.

VIRGO

(Aug. 23 - Sept. 22)
Happy birthday! Why not treat yourself to some Virgoan body rearrangement this year? Many Virgos delight in the redistribution and decoration of their physical mass. Admit it, don't you get a perverse little lift every time you change your hairstyle, adopt a new fashion, develop an extra inch of muscle somewhere, or acquire a new genital piercing? Your body is yours to redecorate as you choose this week. Enjoy yourself.

LIBRA

(Sept. 23 - Oct. 22)
If prediction fails this week, don't take statistics into account. Consider that statistics could convince you to believe that if most saxophone players are secret bondage freaks, the next saxophone player you meet could have a foot fetish instead. Probability isn't prediction, you know. Speaking of which, this week you'll probably have a wonderful time, fall in love, and get laid.

SCORPIO

(Oct. 23 - Nov. 20)
Many people out there are born under the sign of Scorpio, and they don't appreciate tasteless jokes about their conditions. Such insensitivity is cruel and hurtful. From now on, all Scorpios should be referred to as Survivors of November Natal Syndrome, entitling them to grants, legal defenses, and multipurpose excuses for doing whatever they want, including forcibly rearranging the perspectives of clueless whiners.

SAGITTARIUS

(Nov. 21 - Dec. 21)
This will be a quiet week. You might long for the chaos and discord of a busy life, and you might miss all those annoying little complications that help you remember that you're alive, but then again, you might not have a stretch of freedom like this for a little while. Engage in something you truly enjoy and relish the resulting peace.

CAPRICORN

(Dec. 22 - Jan. 19)
This week, pay some thought to all of your loving, devoted friends and ask yourself: How can I ever get anything done with all these people hanging around? Periodically, every Capricorn must investigate its social gene pool and consider discarding those elements that don't appear to be leading toward your personal evolution. Shun nags, creeps, and drains.

AQUARIUS

(Jan. 20 - Feb. 18)
I only have to write one more of these rotten things and I'm off the hook! Yahoo! Then I can go watch cartoons, or call up one of my friends and gossip! Uh-oh, it's Aquarius. They're sharp. They'll know if I whip out something quick in my haste to get to the couch. Better be vague and mysterious. Uh, this week you'll be distracted and impatient. Bye.

PISCES

(Feb. 19 - March 20)
What do you call a gathering of Pisceans? A whine and sleaze festival! Yeah, right, bad joke. But the week ahead looks like an even worse joke, as Mercury and the Sun cruise brazenly into the dreary and humorless land of Virgo. You'll be generally disapproved of anyway, so don't make it worse by letting it upset you. ■

Charon's not doing charts at this time, but you can write her at P.O. Box 191434, S.F., CA 94119.

HOW THESE COMPANIES EARNED CONSUMER VALUESTAR

CONSUMER VALUESTAR helps Bay Area residents identify companies that have very high customer satisfaction. Only those businesses that have passed CONSUMER VALUESTAR'S four-step rating process earn the symbol.

Step 1: Customer Satisfaction Rating

To guarantee an accurate and unbiased result, this rating is performed by the Public Research Institute of San Francisco State University.
First, a random sample of approximately 300 customers is selected from an applicant's records. A company can not pick and choose which customers the institute contacts. Next, approximately 100 customers are asked to rate
how satisfied they are.

The customers' identities are kept completely confidential.

Based on the customers' answers, the company's customer satisfaction rating is calculated. To pass, the company must exceed an industry-specific benchmark score for the Bay area.

Step 2: Complaint Bureaus Check

The applicant's status is checked with industry specific and general complaint bureaus.

Step 3: License Verification

The company must have valid licenses in good standing for the services it offers to the public.

Step 4: Insurance Verification

The applicant's insurance agents must provide written certificates of insurance
showing that the company has the appropriate coverage.

The Soft Rain

I'm not sure I care about the known end familiar, the old, trodden path of past reactions and predicted responses. I want to start anew, to explore the possible as opposed to the probable. Surely our future is more than the sum of our pasts. The drops that make up a rainfall are born anew, never before seen or heard. And though they evoke the echoes of a known past, they drench us in the certainty of an unknown future, full of promise and possibility. So, too, can it be for you and me. POB 3390, Saratoga 95070. #4187 (exp.08/31) ☐

Tired of dating thoughtless, insensitive men? Frankly, I'm tired of you dating them. I want a beautiful, sensitive, nonsmoking, 21-35 WF/ AF like you deserves much better! Don't delay! Happiness in the arms of a passionate, handsome Neapolitan lover is but a phone call away! Ti prego di lasciare un messaggio sensuale! #4941 (exp.09/14) ☐

Hey

I'm a bright, funny psychologist in my fifties if you are a smart, tallish, interesting looking woman in her late-thirties or so, have work you love, and have a mouth for kissing, an ear for Sinatra, and an eye for Carver-Bresson, Fellini, and me, then maybe we can have a future together. RELATIONSHIPS

MEN SEEKING WOMEN 9400

Latin Or Asian

Bride For Jewish Groom
JM, 44, prosperous homeowner/ professional desires marriage and future family with Latin, Asian or exceptional Caucasian women. I'm 6 feet tall, 185 lbs., and physically active. My interests range from gardening to photography from S.F. Symphony to S.J. Sharks, NPR to CNN, from the Stones to Los Lobos, good food to good movies, etc... I want to find someone who is my age up to 35 or so, physically fit, culturally open-minded and who takes pride in her appearance. She should be self-assured, decidedly feminine and someone who genuinely likes men. Her education or occupation are not nearly so important to me as her kindness, her honesty, her integrity. I consider myself above average in appearance, smart, funny, politically skeptical but definitely opinionated, occasionally hip, well-dressed when I want to be, always dependable, vulnerable at times, but nearly always upbeat and confident. Most important though, I am a generous, kind and decent guy whose only unfulfilled dream is a loving wife and family. If you're willing to reach out to a wonderful stranger who is unfazed of a lifelong commitment, then this is the ad, and now is the time. No! photo preferred, will reciprocate/ return. TRIED THE REST? NOW TRY THE BEST!!!

The LUSTY LADY in North Beach features the finest in all nude, adult entertainment. We are now hiring for part-time female dancers. Pay rate starts at $9/ hour. You can get an automatic dollar raise every other week until you are making $13 per hour. After $13/ hour, raises are based on job performance & can reach $22/ hour. We offer flexible scheduling, the ability to take vacations & time-off without starting over on wages. Dependable, weekly paychecks. We take out taxes so you won't be hit by the I.R.S. in April. This also makes you eligible for related benefits. We even offer access to low cost health & dental plans.

No hustling for your pay, no customer contact, no drugs, no alcohol, no sexual harassment. No other theatre in the city offers such a positive working environment. You co-workers will be responsible, fun to work with & supportive. Your managers will be women who understand being a performer. The Lusty Lady is a safe, supportive, clean environment for women to express themselves erotically. We are looking for adventurous, sexy, confident women. You must be beautiful, playful, and fun. We like women who are responsible, trustworthy & drop-dead gorgeous. You must be in-shape, healthy, uninhibited and without tattoos or body piercings and have hair past your jaw line. Working at the Lusty Lady is a unique experience! Give it a try! You must be 18/ yrs. or older with a valid I.D. 1033 Kearny in North Beach. Call Catherine or Anna at 415-391-3126.

Maimeri Classico 150ml Oils

Only $4.98 List $9.95

Tradition and innovation are the basic guidelines for the production of these colors. The centuries-old basic formula of "oil, pigment and nothing else" has been passed down from generation to generation. While adhering to the old formula and avoiding all additives, modern pigments are used to create colors with good lightfastness that are bright and lively in tone.

Save 40% Off List These Cosmos Watercolor Brushes!

Cosmos 1570 Synthetic Watercolor Brushes

You've seen us promote this brush repeatedly. This is because the 1570 is simply the best synthetic watercolor brush available and we would like you to discover it!

Unlike natural hair brushes, synthetic hair brushes do not absorb liquid - allowing it to run off freely. To remedy this problem, Cosmos has constructed the Series 1570 of filaments with unique ridges and a different head taper that holds and slows the release of paint. Available in sizes 5x0 through 24.

Cosmos Da Vinci Synthetic Wash Brushes

An excellent brush for bold strokes and washes. Available in sizes 8, 16, 18, and 20.

Please donate to our Art Supplies for Kids (ASK) Fund and we will match it!

Schools everywhere are experiencing a budget crisis, and art programs are the first to go. Many dedicated teachers are spending their own money to buy art supplies for their students — even basics like crayons, paste and paper.

The ASK program collects donations from our customers and Amsterdam Art matches them, dollar for dollar, with the help of contributing vendors. Amsterdam Art pays for all administrative costs, so that every penny can be distributed directly to deserving school teachers (K through grade 12). Funds are distributed in the form of grants for free art supplies to be used in the classroom. Since the spring of 1993 we have distributed $14,400.00 to 255 Bay Area teachers from the following school districts:

Berkeley, Oakland, Richmond, Vallejo, El Cerrito, Albany, San Leandro, Alameda, Hayward, San Francisco, Walnut Creek, Pittsburg, Hercules, Daly City, San Pablo, Benicia, Lafayette, Pleasant Hill, San Rafael, Alameda, Concord and Martinez.

All school teachers are invited to apply for an

Amsterdam Art Teachers Discount Card

The card entitles school teachers to a 30% discount off the manufacturer's list price on all items or the sale price, whichever is lower. Excluded are custom framing, photostats and yardage goods. If you are a teacher, please pick up an application for a Discount Card at any of our four stores.
